Sadat hails 'new era'

U.S., Egyptians resume diplomatic relations

CAIRO (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat announced today that the United States and Egypt have resumed full diplomatic relations.

At the same time, he publicly praised U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and advised Syria to work out with him a military disengagement with Israel.

Egypt severed diplomatic relations with Washington early in the 1967 Six Day war with a charge U.S. 6th Fleet aircraft had helped the Israelis destroy the Arab air forces. That charge was later retracted but relations remained broken for seven years.

A joint announcement in Cairo and Washington said the two countries "express the hope that this step will develop and strengthen relaxation between their countries and contribute substantially to better mutual understanding and cooperaion."

Anticipating the official announcement by an hour, Sadat stood beside Kissinger on the terrace of a guest house overlooking the pyramids, called him "my friend" and said that relations with the United States had been resumed.

Sadat said there was significance in the fact that he wore a blue pinstriped civilian suit instead of his military uniform to receive the American Secretary of State.

He said it did not mean the war was over, but that "a new era" has begun and that Kissinger was the first foreign official he had received wearing civilian clothes.

Asked about the prospects for lifting the Arab oil embargo, Sadat said he understood there would be a meeting of Arab oil ministers some time in March to consider it, but he did not yet know the date.

There were several other major Mideast developments today:

—The Israeli cabinet met in Jerusalem to draw up its proposals on disengaging Israel and Syrian forces. Kissinger broke the Israeli-Syrian deadlock Wednesday when he shuttled from Damascus to Jerusalem with a list of Israeli war prisoners — Israel's prerequisite for beginning talks with Syria. Prime Minister Golda Meir wept when he handed them over.

Sadat said relations already were resumed and that Egypt's Arab allies who broke relations with the United States at the same time in 1967 had been advised that Egypt was resuming full relations.

Many claim new plan will create problems

By JON MORRIS
P-B Staff Writer

Service station operators in the Pomona Valley braced today for implementation of the odd-even gas marketing plan Friday, with many preparing for it "with apprehension."

Gov. Reagan's plan calls for car owners whose license plates end in odd numbers to purchase gas on odd numbered days of the month; and those with even numbers buying gas on even-numbered days.

It also prevents motorists from "topping off" their tanks—as no one is to be sold gas if he has more than a half a tank left.

The plan, which goes into effect throughout Los Angeles County—but not in San Bernardino County—was not greeted with much enthusiasm by a number of station operators contacted by the Progress-Bulletin.

"I have a great deal of apprehension about the plan," said Joe Ellis, operator of a Chevron station at Indian Hill Boulevard and Arrow Highway in Claremont. "We do welcome the possible ease up from long lines of cars, but I'm afraid it will create problems."

"Sticking your head in someone's car will create trouble," said Al Mullins, owner of a Gulf station at 2475 S. Garey Ave. in Pomona. "I don't feel people will cooperate with the plan, and you'll have to place a policeman at every station to control tempers."

Mullins pointed out that commercial vehicles will be exempted from the new plan, and "how can you tell if it's a commercial car? You'll have to ak for ID cards."

One operator of a Diamond Bar Mobil station, said he has been using the odd-even plan voluntarily for several days and likes it. "It'll keep those witn full tanks from topping off," said Link Ralph. "Before, I had one customer come in and buy 19 cents worth of gas. Another woman cane in, complained about the long lines of cars, then bought $1.30 worth of gas."

Police spokesmen in the area were somewhat unsure of their exact role in the new plan. Reagan's plan calls for police enformcement of the odd-even program.

"We haven't heard from anyone on what authority we have to enforce this thing," said Lt. Charles Starcher of the Claremont police department. "If we don't hear anything by this afternoon we'll probably pursue it ourselves."

Reagan's plan calls for violators—both station operators and motorists to be cited by local police and subject to a maximum $500 fine, six months in jail, or both—and the fines would cover all areas of his program.

Pomona Police Capt. Grady Weddle says his department is prepared to cite violators. "If a guy demands gas and it's not his day to get it he will be subject to citation."

Weddle admitted he was not certain how far officers can go in enforcement of the plan, but said he was ready.

La Verne Police Sgt. Wes Stearns stated he will be answering complaints at stations, "keeping the peace, mainly. We haven't received any word from the district attorney's office, but we plan to talk to them today.

Capt. Weddle and several station operators pointed to an "unfair" aspect of the program, due to its Friday beginning. Motorists with odd numbered plates will get gas Friday, but most stations apparently will be closed Sunday, so the next day for those with odd numbers won't be until Tuesday.

Meanwhile, San Bernardino County supervisors will meet in special session at 3 p.m. today to decide whether the county will participate in the alternate-day plan. "We don't want to be stampeded into doing this unless it can solve some problems," declared Supervisor Dennis Hansberger.

The county has claimed it does not have an emergency gas situation.

Under the "marketing" plan for gasoline sales, keyed to alternate odd-even day purchases according to the license plate's last digit:

—Gasoline will not be sold to anyone who already has more than half a tankful. If a station attendent so demanded, the motorist would be required to permit inspection of his fuel gauge.

—Stations must not refuse gasoline sales to anyone on his appropriate odd or even day, except those whose tanks are more than half filled.

Pentagon ready to hunt for balloonist--but where is he?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon says it is standing by to launch an air and sea search for missing balloonist Thomas L. Gatch, whose 10-day supply of rations runs out today.

But a Defense Department computer projection showed the 48-year-old bachelor could be anywhere from the Caribbean eastward all the way to Hong kong.

"We're all standing by to search for him if anybody can figure out what to do," said Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim.

It has been one week since the last confirmed sighting of Gatch, who is trying to be the first man to cross the Atlantic Ocean in a balloon. Wiliam Armstrong, a Federal Energy Office employe who helped Gatch prepare for his flight, said the adventurer had rations for 10 days and his craft was equipped with a life raft and flotation devices.

"We still think he's in the water someplace," Armstrong said.

Friedheim said information fed into the Defense Department's computer by Gatch's aides resulted in a print-out showing Gatch could be anywhere within a 6-million-mile area, since wind velocities vary with the altitude and there is no way to know Gatch's altitude.

Gatch took off on Feb. 18 from Harrisburg, Pa., planning to land Feb. 22 or 23 somewhere along the west coast of Europe. He was blown off course by Jet Stream winds to an area off the coast of northwestern Africa.

The last confirmed sighting of Gatch's gondola, suspended from eight helium-filled balloons, was one week ago, about 1,000 miles west of the Canary Islands.

New postal rate hike in effect midnight Friday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of mailing a letter goes up 2 cents at midnight Friday.

New stamps will be required for both first class postage, which becomes 10 cents, and air mail, which goes to 13.

Coinciding with the higher rates was publication of a private research study saying there was no economic justification for the U.S. Postal Service holding a monopoly on the nation's mail.

The American Enterprise Institute for Public Research Policy called for repeal of a 182-year-old law that virtually prohibits competition in the postal service.

Supplanting the familiar 8-cent portrait of President Dwight D. Eisenhower as the nation's basic stamp is a new 10-cent first class stamp showing the Jeferson Memorial in Washington, D.C. under the words from the Declaration of Independence: 'We hold these Truths..'.

The new air mail stamp depicts a winged airmail envelope.

Postcards also go up to 8 cents and mail rates for books, records, newspapers and magazines, and mail order merchandise will also rise.

Covinan admits slaying wife, companion here

POMONA — A Covina maintenance man was held to answer murder charges Wednesday after a Pomona police officer testified that the suspect admitted to him that he killed his estranged wife and her companion here Feb. 12.

Ronnie Willis Michael, 27, was bound over to Superior Court for arraignment March 14 following a three-hour preliminary hearing before Municipal Court Judge W. J. Harpham.

Detective Kurt Longfellow, the only witness called to the stand by Deputy Dist. Atty. Tom Peterson told the court that Michael broke down after submitting to a lie detector test three days after the slayings and related how the slayings came about.

Longfellow said Michael tried to outsmart the polygraph, but failed. When confronted with the readings on the lie detector, Michael sighed and declared: "I've got to get this off my chest," the officer testified.

Then, according to the detective, Michael signed a statement admitting the slayings.

Longfellow quoted Michael as saying that he went to talk to his wife, Connie, 28, who was staying at the home of Wayne Douglas Beach, 28, at 1612 White Ave.

Michael said that Beach pulled a shotgun on him, according to the officer's testimony. He said he and Beach struggled for the gun and that Beach got shot during the scuffle. He said Connie "jumped on my back and I hit her," Longfellow testified.

According to the coroner's report, Beach was shot and beaten; Mrs. Michael died of injuries she suffered from the beating.

In an earlier story, Michael said he sought to hurt Beach last fall with a bow and arrow, but he couldn't locate such a weapon, Longfellow testified. Then, according to the statement, he "had a contract out" and paid someone $50 to hurt Beach.

However, after the lie detector apparently rejected both stories, Michael admitted the killings, police said.

The defense offered no evidence, and the defendant was returned to custody without bond.

Picked wrong house to rob: policeman's

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — John D. Stewart, 39, picked the wrong house for a burglary Wednesday.

The home belonged to Sheriff's Sgt. Jack Jordan who promptly put the handcuffs on Stewart and the suspect was taken to jail.

Weekend rain threatens race, other events

Unsettled weather with a chance of rain, as forecast through the weekend by National Weather Service, could pose a threat to California 500 events Saturday and Sunday.

More than 50,000 persons are expected to attend the qualifying Saturday and the twin 100-mile races on Sunday.

The weatherman said skies over the valley would be cloudy today and temperatures, which have been in the mid-70s the past few days, would dip into the high 60s.

There is a chance of rain on Friday, the weatherman said. He called for unsettled weather through the weekend.

Would mean 'longer gasoline lines, rationing'

Will veto emergency energy bill, says Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today that he would veto an emergency energy bill passed by Congress.

He said it would result in "longer gas lines and compulsory gasoline rationing — and that, we're not going to have."

Nixon, speaking to a Young Republican Leadership conference at the Shoreham Hotel, said the answer to the nation's energy problem would be to act on other legislation he had proposed to increase the energy supplies.

"The bill passed by the Congress will result in longer gas lines and would result in compulsory gasoline rationing for the country, and that we're not going to have," Nixon said.

"I shall veto that bill," he declared.

The President called the bill —given final congressional approval Wednesday by the House —"well intentioned," but said a provision to roll back oil prices would cause longer instead of shorter gasoline waiting lines.

"It would be better," Nixon said, "for the Congress to act on the proposals we have before them —some of them for a very long time —to increase the supply of energy."

The energy bill was approved by the Senate by a margin of more than two to one, and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., its chief sponsor, has predicted the Senate will vote to override the veto. But the margin of passage in the House was less than two to one.

It takes a two-thirds majority in each chamber to override a veto.

Gasoline lines which Nixon said would get longer under the disputed legislation were still long today —especially in metropolitan areas —and motorists will see prices go up starting Friday. A 3-cent increase in pump prices has been authorized by the energy office, with 2 cents of it slated to go into effect Friday.

Nixon's objection is to a provision ordering a rollback in price of "new" oil from domestic wells which have gone into production since 1972. This oil, now selling at an average of more than $10 a barrel, would be priced at the average $5.25 at which "old" oil is already controlled.

Savings from the rollback must be passed on to consumers of residual oil or refined petroleum products.

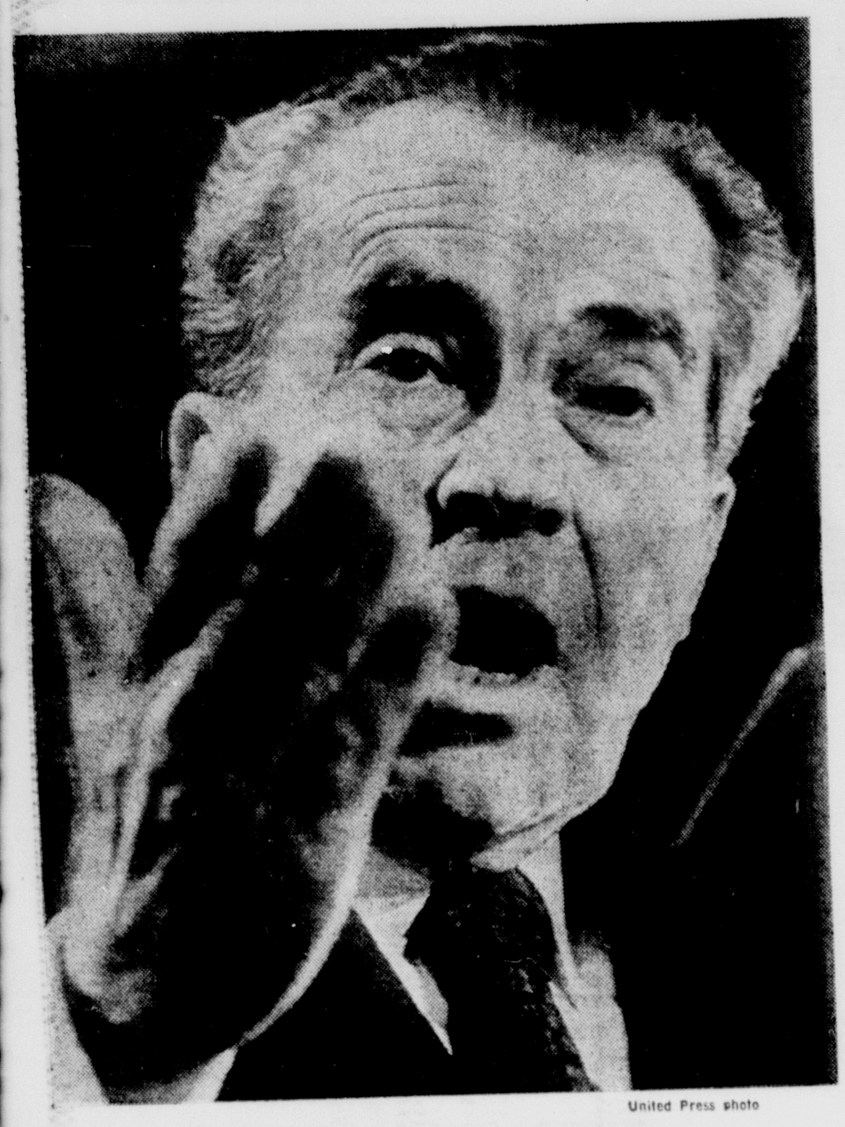

The administration argued that the rollback would discourage production

March allocations of gasoline were expected to be announced today or Friday by the Federal Energy Office (FEO).

With emergency supplies provided by FEO last week to 26 states, there appeared to be improvement in the struggle to buy gasoline in some areas.

In the District of Columbia some service stations began pumping gasoline around the clock to dispense their increased February allocation.

New York City motorists found some lines less than a block long. An extra 20 million gallons reduced lines in Chicago. But in Los Angeles County, motorists had to wait up to an hour for a limit of 5 to 6 gallons of gasoline.

PREDICTS GOP VICTORIES

President Nixon tells young Republicans Wednesday he expects a Republican to be in the White House eight years after his own administration is over. His audience cheered.

His kidnapers had some good, says newsman

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A veteran Memphis newsman, kidnaped and robbed of $5 and some change Wednesday night by three men who kept him hostage for several hours, said today there had to be "some good" in his abductors.

Carl Marsh, a reporter for the Memphis Press-Scimitar since 1926, told of his experience in today's editions of the afternoon newspaper.

"If there weren't some good in the three fellows who kidnaped me, robbed me of a small amount of money and then stole my automobile after putting me out at the end of a harrowing ride," he wrote, "I wouldn't be able to tell the story on this page today."

Police described the gunmen as three blacks in their early 20's. They will be charged with robbery, kidnaping and auto theft if apprehended, authorities said.

Marsh said he had gone to a discount department store in the Whitehaven suburb of the city to do some shopping and returned to his car about 8 p.m.

"Out of the corner of my eye," he said, "I could see this shady character about 15 paces away rushing to the car. He got there before I could close the door and had his pistol, a revolver, pointing at me."

Marsh said the gunman ordered him to move to the passenger side of the car and got behind the wheel. Two other men got into the back seat, he said.

"Then and there he (the gunman) relieved me of the small amount of money I was carrying, a $5 bill," Marsh said. "Angered at the small amount of loot, he stuck the gun in my ribs and threatened my life."

The reporter, whose primary duties now are promotional, said the three men drove him almost to the Mississippi state line and then made him get out.

"One of them asked me if I didn't have some more money and I told them just some change in my pants pocket," he said. "One rammed his hand down in it and took that.

"By this time, I had told them that I had a little money in the bank and they conceived the idea of having me write out to myself three checks of $100 each."

Marsh said he got back into the car and he and his abductors then began a winding ride around the city as he attempted to find a store that would cash his checks. Clerks at two grocery stores and two liquor stores refused, he said.

Answer to Russia

Nuclear blast topples stack of chips in Vegas

YUCCA FLAT, Nev. (UPI) — A nuclear weapon, believed to be a sophisticated missile warhead, was exploded beneath the desert Wednesday less than a month after President Nixon warned that Russia is pushing development of new nuclear arms.

The blast shook the casinos and high rise buildings of Las Vegas 70 miles away, toppling stacks of gambling chips and swaying chandeliers and blinds.

It was registered on seismographs throughout the West, appearing as the equivalent of an earthquake of 5 to 5.5 magnitude on the Richter scale.

The explosion came 10 days after the Soviet Union announced a new series of missile tests in the mid-Pacific, which U.S. defense sources said almost certainly involved development of multiple nuclear warhead weapons.

President Nixon, in his 1975 defense budget submitted earlier this month called for spending $7.6 billion on nuclear weapons systems, saying the Soviets are aggressively pursuing development of advanced nuclear arms.

A small dust cloud puffed skyward and the earth jumped several feet at ground zero as the nuclear device was detonated at 10 a.m. Wednesday. The weapon was lowered 2,103 feet down a four foot wide vertical shaft. The Environmental Protection Agency, monitoring the test from a plane flying above the site, said no radioactivity escaped into the atmosphere.

Strike of coal miners grows along with gasoline shortage

WELCH, W. Va. (UPI) — The ranks of soft coal miners striking in southern West Virginia because of a gasoline shortage swelled Wednesday to more than 15,000.

An official of the West Virginia Coal Association estimated that the production of badly needed coal has declined by 175,000 tons daily during the shutdown in eight counties.

Gov. Arch Moore and Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., contacted federal energy officials in an attempt to hasten delivery of fuel supplies to the stricken area, and aides of United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller met with miners here to ask those with adequate gasoline to return to work.

Meanwhile, Mayor Wesley Miller of War, about 15 miles south, took more direct approach to end the strike. He ordered police to halt any gasoline tankers that enter the coal town at gunpoint and force the drivers to fill tanks at service stations—regardless of whether the fuel was meant for them.

"I've given the orders," Miller told UPI. "I'll sign the papers and take full responsibility. We're desperate. We're out of gas."

Miller said he had unsuccessfully tried to obtain fuel by calling President Nixon's office, other government officials and major oil companies.

Byrd sent a telegram to William Simon, director of the Federal Eenrgy Office, in an effort to gain quick delivery of promised extra allocations.

"Making increased allocations on paper is one thing, but the problem won't be relieved until the gas actually reaches the pumps," the telegram said. Byrd later met with Simon.

Mrs. Miller's attorney gets 3 months in jail

SAN BERNARDINO — San Bernardino attorney Edward P. Foley, who defended Mrs. Lucille Miller in her 1960 murder case, has been fined $1,000 and ordered to jail for three months for not paying state income taxes for three years.

The sentence was handed down Wednesday following a non-jury trial by San Bernardino Superior Court Judge Richard Garner. Garner ordered Foley to begin serving the jail sentence in the San Bernardino County Jail beginning March 8. Foley was found guilty of three misdemeanor counts of failing to file his state income tax returns for 1969 to 1971. Foley will be placed on summary probation for three years after he pays his fine and serves his jail sentence.

Foley in 1960 defended Mrs. Miller when she was found guilty of drugging and burning to death her dentist husband, Gordon, in Alta Loma.

Mrs. Miller was finally released on paraole in May 1972 after serving seven years at California Institution for Women.

Nixon sees Republican in White House after he leaves

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon told cheering young Republicans today he expected a Republican to be in the White House eight years after his own administration is over.

Nixon made the forecast to about 600 young Republicans attending a leadership conference. They cheered and whistled, especially when he talked about ending the draft and the Vietnam war.

"You can take pride that you supported the men and policies that put an end to the war which was here when we came to office," Nixon said. He said it was easy to support the country in time of war but harder "to live in a time when the challenges are the challenges of peace."

The crowd started a chant of "Three more years ... three more years," reminiscent of the 1972 Miami Beach convention chant of "four more years ... four more years."

Nixon responded by holding up three fingers.

The President advised the Young Republicans: "Never quit, always go on and fight for the things you believe in."

In his extemporaneous speech, Nixon appeared to be discussing his own Watergate fight when he gave his "advice for potential politicians."

"Keep your faith, keep your confidence," he told them, even when "mistakes are made by people in your party."

He told the GOP leaders, ranging in age from 18 to 36: "If you think there are things wrong then get in and do something about it. Build the Republican party, that is a just goal."

With frequent bursts of prolonged applause interrupting him, Nixon promised his young Republican audience that "looking over the next three years I believe we can make great progress in world peace, relieving tensions in the Middle East and on the home front, moving forward toward prosperity without war and inflation."

Calley free on bond after three years

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — Lt. William L. Calley Jr., convicted of murdering 22 civilian Vietnamese at My Lai, was freed on $1,000 bond Wednesday after telling a federal court he felt he could be "useful to society" while his case is being appealed.

Calley indicated at the hearing he would continue to live at his Ft. Benning apartment while attempting to have his conviction overthrown in civilian courts on constitutional grounds.

The stocky, 30-year-old lieutenant will be free to go anywhere he wants, however, according to a military spokesman. He has been confined for nearly three years to his bachelor officers quarters under guard.

Calley, the only Army officer convicted in the My Lai massacre, said he wanted his freedom so he could work to have his sentence set aside. He has filed a writ of habeas corpus in federal court asking that his conviction be overturned.

U.S. District Court Judge J. Robert Elliott said he ordered Calley released because his 20-year sentence could be reduced since it is presently under review by Secretary of the Army Howard Callaway and President Nixon has also said he will review the case.

"Since it is uncertain when these reviews will be completed, the effect of this situation is that unless released on bail it is possible that he will be confined for a longer period than would have been required by the terms of his sentence as it may eventually be reduced," ruled Elliott.

Offered leniency in exchange?

Judge acceptance of favors charged

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — Four women testified Wednesday that General Sessions Court Judge Thomas B. McDonald offered leniency in his court in exchange for sexual relations with the women.

One of the witnesses, Cheryl Forsythe, said she escaped punishment for as many as 25 charges of writing bad checks during a two-year period by granting McDonald's request for sexual favors.

State Attorney General William J. Baxley withheld from the courtroom the names of two witnesses because, he said, they did not have criminal records, they were married mothers and lived in Huntsville.

One of the unidentified women said she met McDonald at the office of a local real estate company to discuss an automobile theft charge against her brother. She said McDonald told her to remove her clothing and "have a sex had sexual relations on the couch."

Mrs. Forsythe had testified earlier that she met McDonald at the same real estate company office and, "we had sexual relations on the counch."

Another witness, Laura Bland, said she appeared before McDonald on a charge of bigamy, and the judge made advances toward her in his locked office and asked her to meet him at a local motel. Mrs. Bland, 26, an inmate in the West Virginia Federal Penitentiary for women, said she did not meet McDonald at the motel.

A Madison County grand jury indicted McDonald, 58, in May, 1973, on five charges of irregularities in office. He was being tried separately on each charge.

Baxley said in an opening statement that McDonald had "allowed his lust or sickness or whatever to influence his judgment where young female defendants were concerned."

Defense attorney Glenn Manning said McDonald had been one of the most respected men in Maidson County before pretrial news coverage of the case.

SETTING PROBLEM AFIRE — Students from Chaffey College Fire Academy put out one of a series of fires they set Wednesday at 13058 10th St., Chino, as part of their training, at the same time reducing Chino's abandoned housing problem. A single family residence at the address was donated for training purposes.

Fire students get practice in Chino

By TONY NAVARRO

CHINO — This city Wednesday took a blazing approach toward reducing its abandoned housing problem while at the same time providing an opportunity for actual on-the-job experience for 24 students from Chaffey College.

A boarded-up, single family residence at 13058 10th St. was destroyed by a series of fires as the owners of the property, Walter J. Schaaff and Bill McVittie, stood by with approving looks.

Also at the scene were Councilman Angel Martinez, vice chairman of the Greater Pomona Valley Mayors' Action Committee on Abandoned Housing, and Pomona Asst. City Administrator Joseph F. Korpsak, acting executive director of the Valley Association of Cities.

The building was donated to the college's Fire Academy to permit the training of new firemen under actual fire conditions.

Martinez used the occasion to criticize the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which owns a majority of some 1,000 abandoned houses in nine cities in the Pomona Valley-West End area.

"The federal government should turn these homes over to either our local cities or to free enterprise firms for rehabilitation or alternative uses," Martinez said.

Of the nine cities, Pomona faces the most critical problem with more than 800 bandoned houses. Chino ranks third from the bottom in the number of abandoned units and Martinez pointed out that with the burning of the 10th Street residence, abandoned houses in Chino had been reduced to five.

The students represent the fire departments of Chino, Ontario, Montclair, Lake Arrowhead, Corona, Covina, San Bernardino, Rialto, and the Central Valley fire departments.

They were supervised by Asst. Fire Chief Bud Maloney, Ed Smith and fire science coordinator at Chaffey College. Other academy instructors are Captains Dan Schulter, Dick Sewell and Jon Joe Longo.

Schaaff said the 10th street property would be leveled and become part of a larger development of new multiple-family units.

Youth Training School

Witness links five to riot

ONTARIO — A witness identified five of nine Negro wards Wednesday as carrying prison-made knives, ice picks, and clubs during a racial riot at the Youth Training School in Chino on July 9, 1974.

Michael Anthony Rios, called to the witness stand Wednesday by Deputy Dist. Atty. William Parker, told the West Valley Superior Court jury that one of the five defendants, Marvin Kincy, attempted to stab him in the back with an ice pick type weapon.

Kincy, Alvin Todd, Gregory McCloud, Virgil Dunkentell, Henry Jackson, Anthony R. Rixter, Donald M. Candler, and Bertram Rogers, all Negro wards at YTS, and their former counselor Stanley Wagstaff, 31, are accused of conspiracy to commit assault with a deadly weapon on other wards at the youth facility. In a riot on July 9, 1973, five Caucasian youths were hospitalized with serious knife wounds.

Rios said he saw Candler stab Alfred Daniels, a Caucasian ward, in the chest. He recalled seeing a group of Negro wards surrounding Daniels and five other Caucasian wards he identified as Albert Bient, Schaefer, Robins, Burroughs and Chris Avilos. He identified some of the Negro wards he saw as Kincy, Candler, McCloud, Rogers, Jackson and Rixter. He said that Kincy, Candler, McCloud, and Rogers had ice pick weapons or knives in their hands and Jackson had a wooden armed chair handle that looked like an "Irish walking stick."

Earlier Bivens testified that during the fighting he, Daniels and Avilos were shoved into a cell by the force of the crowd. He identified Kincy, Rixter, and another Negro ward not on trial, as members of the crowd shoving them into the cell.

Work starts Friday on lab at Poly

POMONA — Groundbreaking ceremonies will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday for the new science building near the central quad of Cal Poly.

Officiating at the ceremonies will be Robert C. Kramer, president of the college. Guest speaker will be state Assemblyman William Lancaster, who represents the 49th District.

The 125,000-square-foot building will house science laboratories, classrooms and offices as well as storage rooms, animal colonies, greenhouses, workrooms and shops for the upkeep and repair of equipment. The university computer center also will be located in the structure which is scheduled for completion in two years.

Trial ordered for three in cattle theft

POMONA — Two men and a woman accused of rustling cattle from Mt. San Antonio College last month were bound over to Superior Court Wednesday after a brief preliminary hearing before Judge W. J. Harpham in Municipal Court.

Charged with grand theft and receiving stolen property are Alfred Tovar, 28, Russell Gonzales, 22, and Joyce Gonzales, 20, all of Los Angeles.

A fourth suspect, Reno Ray Ortiz, 25, did not show up for the preliminary hearing, and Judge Harpham issued a warrant for his arrest.

The defendants are accused of stuffing two 4-day-old calves at the MSAC barn into the trunk of their car Jan. 28, and driving to Los Angeles. They were arrested by two policemen there who became suspicious of the clunking noises made by the calves.

Saxbe feels Nixon won't be impeached

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General William B. Saxbe has said he does not believe the House will vote to impeach President Nixon unless it finds evidence of wrongdoing that has not been publicly revealed.

Asked during a news conference if he believed the President will be impeached, Saxbe said: "Anything I say would be a guess. Unless they come up with something I'm not aware of I don't think he will be."

Saxbe told reporters he personally agrees however with a view expressed by Vice President Gerald R. Ford in 1970 when, while House Republican Leader, he sought to get the House to impeach Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

Ford said at the time that "an impeachable offense is whatever a majority of the House of Representatives considers it to be at a given moment in history."

Bridge

Percentage play clicks

By Oswald & James Jacoby

A match-point duplicate player would probably go down at three notrump. He would look over dummy; decide that three notrump was a normal contract and take the diamond finesse in an effort to score as many overtricks as possible.

A winning rubber bridge player would make the contract. He would win the first spade and study the hand just long enough to see that if West held the king of diamonds three notrump would wheel in even though West made his king. Then he would see that trouble was in store if East held that very important card.

Applying the H of the Code word ARCH he would ask himself: "How can I make this hand if East holds the king of diamonds?"

Then he would see that the king just might be singleton. He would lead his 10 of diamonds at trick two and then rise with dummy's ace. Caution and percentage-play would be rewarded. The king would drop. South would run off the rest of the diamond suit and be sure of at least 10 tricks.

He would probably make it 11, although perfect discarding by East and West would stop that second overtrick.

When should I have sex?

By JEAN ADAMS

ONE DAY: (Q.) I need an answer fast. I am 17 years old and going with this dude who is 18. We have been dating for a year and a half. He never has asked me for sex, but I know he will one day, and so I want to know when is the right time to have sex without getting pregnant.—Not Yet in Texas

(A.) When you're 60!

This may sound facetious to you, but the truth is that before the "change of life" you take a pregnancy chance each time you have intercourse without the protection of the pill or some other reliable contraceptive.

Another thing—sex is much too major a matter to decide all of a sudden that "Now it's time."

OVERWEIGHT: (W.) My girl friend is overweight and she can't keep the boys off of her. I am overweight too, but when I tell a boy I like him he runs.

Do you think being fat is my problem? I act just as weird as the rest of the girls.—No Boy Friends in Alabama

(A.) It is true that SOME overweight girls are popular with boys. But, other things being equal, girls who keep their weight under control are more likely to have boy friends.

I advise you to get your pounds and inches into line. I also advise you not to go around openly telling any and all boys you like them. I also advise you to be natural instead of weird. Most boys like girls who are natural.

Health care costs rising

NEW YORK (UPI) — National expenditures on health care rose from $78.35 per person in 1969 to $394.16 per person by 1972. The per capita cost will be $757 by 1980, health economists predict.

The changing nature of medical care and inflation are contributing to the expanded medical bill.

1968 antitrust suit against GM never came off

WASHINTON (UPI — A former Justice Department attorney said today that the government prepared in 1968 to file an antitrust suit to break up General Motors, but backed away at the last moment.

Thomas R. Asher, testifying before the Senate antitrust subcommittee in favor of a bill that would lead to the break-up of GM and other firms so large they dominate entire industries, said years of study went into the recommendation, but Donald F. Turner, then assistant attorney general in charge of the Antitrust Division, backed away from filing the suit.

Several weeks after Turner resigned in 1968, he wrote a memo to his successor recommending a suit, Asher said. Nothing came of it, he said.

A task force of lawyers and economists worked on preparing a case against GM, Asher said in prepared testimony.

"All agreed that the automobile industry acted like a monopoly, made money like a monopoly, was unresponsive to consumer demands and desires like a monopoly—in essence, that it had been monopolized and suit should be brought to restructure it so that competition might at least have a fighting chance," Asher said.

"Although the division's intellectual elite believed that General Motors should be broken up and that an effort to do so would, more than any other single act, prove that antitrust can deal with the ugly realities of mid-20th century plutocracy, they all groped for a 'legal theory' which comported with judicial precedent," he said.

"In the absence of a theory which met his high intellectual demands, Turner did nothing, proving Goethe's thesis that 'to act in accordance with one's though is the mos difficult thing in the world'."

Asher said the experience shows that "shared monopolies" which exist when a few powerful firms control an industry—will not be broken up by antitrust enforcement and therefore "it is clear that Congress must act if there is to be any action at all."

GM makes half the cars, most the buses and nearly all the locomotives this country produces.

Cher charges 'slavery' in suit

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Cher Bono has sued her estranged husband Sonny, charging he tricked her into show business slavery for his benefit.

The Bonos, a successful recording and television comedy team, are breaking up. Bono filed for a separation last week and Mrs. Bono responded with a divorce suit.

In a suit filed this week in Superior Court, Mrs. Bono charged that Bono and attorney Irwin O. Spiegel, their business manager, tricked her into "involuntary servitude," in violation of the 13th amendment to the constitution, which outlaws slavery. They took advantage of her because she was "unsophisticated in business matters," and by "constructive fraud" induced her to sign a contract giving them the rights to her future earnings, even if her marriage was dissolved, she said. She will amend the suit later to add a damage figure, she said.

Navy wings for second woman

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (UPI) — Another woman has earned Navy pilot's wings. Judith Neuffer of Wooster, Ohio, became the second woman in Navy history Wednesday to become a Navy flyer.

The 25-year-old Ohio State University graduate was assigned to a hurricane hunter squadron in Jacksonville, Fla. She formerly worked in the Navy's San Diego, Calif., computer center. She received her wings in ceremonies at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station.

The first woman pilot in the Navy is Barbara Allen, who was presented her wings here last week.

Gilliam gets 2 years probation

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Actor Stu Gilliam was placed on two years probation and fined $625 Wednesday for brandishing an ax at a restaurant headwaiter to get a table.

Gilliam, 40, star of the shortlived television series "Roll Out," was found guilty by a jury last month on a charge of "brandishing a deadly weapon in a threatening manner."

The fracas took place at the Lobster Barrel, a Hollywood restaurant run by another television actor, Alan Hale of the series "Gilligan's Island." Gilliam got the ax from his car when the headwaiter said there was no table available immediately, sheriff's deputies testified. Hale helped subdue and hold Gilliam until deputies arrived.

Queen arrives in Australia

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth II arrived in Australia Wednesday where she approved the appointment of a new governor-general, Sir John Robert Kerr.

The queen's approval was announced by Prime Minister Gough Whitlam.

Earlier, Whitlam had greeted the queen, Prince Phillip, Princess Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips at Canberra airport on their arrival from Port Moresby, in Papua-New Guinea.

Shouldn't alter life, says Pope

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Mankind must use science to expand his God-given capabilities, instead of trying to change life according to his own whim, Pope Paul VI said Wednesday.

The pontiff discussed with a group of scientists, including seven Nobel Prize winners, the possibility of modifying humans through biological engineering, and other scientific prospects.

The Roman Catholic Church, he said, "is pleased with the control man is gaining over his own life, not to transform it at will but to expand it according to all the possibilities implicit in his nature."

Busch executive quits in dispute

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — The president of both Anheuser-Busch Inc. and the St. Louis Cardinals baseball team, Richard A. Meyer, has resigned because of a policy disagreement with company chairman August A. Busch Jr.

Meyer, 57, who has been president of the company since April, 1971, will be replaced by August A. Busch III, 36, formerly executive vice president and general manager, the brewery announced Wednesday. The team is a Busch subsidiary.

The elder Busch, chairman and chief executive officer of the company that bears his name, said the disagreement concerned "the magnitude of cost reduction measures in the area of personnel."

Bill to construct CIM court delayed

SACRAMENTO — A bill that would permit San Bernardino County to build a new court building on the northwest corner of the California Institution for Men has been delayed in the Assembly Judiciary Committee until the commitee can determine if the proposal needs legislative approval.

The development was disappointing to Sen. W. Craig Biddle, R— Riverside, presiding Superior Court Judge Richard Garner, San Bernardino County Supervisor Robert Townsend and San Bernardino County Sheriff Frank Bland who attended the judiciary committee meeting Tuesday in Sacramento.

After Judge Garner explained to committee chairman, Charles R. Warren, D-Los Angeles and other committee members that the proposed court site would be open to the public and provide a safe system of handling prison inmates who appear as witnesses and suspects, Warren asked:

"Why do you need a bill? Why doesn't your county Board of Supervisors just go ahead and build the facility? I think all you'd need to do is go to the State Lands Commission or the Department of Corrections for a contractual agreement to use the land."

The new court has tentatively been planned at the northwest corner of CIM at Central and Edison avenues on state prison property. The entrance to the court would be open to the public and adequate parking spaces would be available. Prisoners would enter from the rear of the facility through a security door, under CIM guard. Once inside the court the prisoner would become the responsibility of the court.

Warren told Biddle and the San Bernardino County representatives that he would delay action on the matter until he could get a formal opinion from the legislature's legal counsel.

Biddle said he would agree with Warren's request but added that he has "serious doubts" about whether a county can establish a new branch court without legislative approval.

Other members of the judiciary committee said that if such a bill were needed they would want it limited to San Bernardino County or the Chino prison specifically. They opposed the idea of opening the door to construction of such facilities at some other prisons.

Walnut energy cut could hike rates

By LANGE WINCKLER
P-B Staff Writer

WALNUT — There is not much the City of Walnut can do to save energy, a Southern California Edison Co. representative told the City Council Wednesday night—and if any electrical use is cut down, it could raise utility costs.

In just about the only presentation that took more than a minute during the brief meeting, Milt La Pointe, manager of the Pomona office for the electricity purveyor, said the city could cut down on the number of street lights put in at a development, choose not to light some now in use, reduce the power used by those which are lighted, or take some other steps.

However, he agreed with Councilman William Wentworth that "to conserve energy costs more." While environmentalists oppose the system, La Pointe said, Edison feels that a rate system which reduces costs for electricity as usage goes up is "just." And, since Walnut is in a rate area which reflects moderate power usage, to cut demands even in concert with many other cities would significantly raise the price of electrical service.

Wednesday the city also became the eighth, and next to last, community to approve membership in the Valley Association of Cities. Joining Claremont in the move—Claremont Tuesday approved a resolution of membership—leaves only La Verne to join VAC.

Once underway, VAC will seek to form cooperative programs with federal agencies to cut down on an abandoned housing problem. At this time nearly 1,000 homes in the Pomona Valley are abandoned, according to a study by local planning agencies. Since most of these are financed through federal loan programs, VAC will seek achieve local control in cooperation with the federal government to deal with root causes of abandoned housing.

SBA loans to Mafia, says Times

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Small Business Administration (SBA) in the New Orleans area has been lending persons with known Mafia backgrounds millions of dollars, the New York Times reported today.

The Times said many underworld figures in New Orleans had been ordered to repay the SBA in connection with millions of dollars in loans received fraudulently.

Reporter Paul Delaney said he cross-checked names of SBA loan recipients against lists of characters known to police and interviewed "authoritative sources" and former SBA employes in New Orleans.

The SBA is under investigation nationally by a number of agencies including the FBI for a variety of alleged irregularities.

The Times said underworld figures in New Orleans have for years "enjoyed a cozy relationship" with the local office of the SBA.

The newspaper listed more than a dozen persons identified as underworld figures who have borrowed money from the SBA, including one man, Nofia Pecora, who got $210,000. The Times said he was an associate of Carlos Marcello, the reputed underworld boss of the area.

Europe's energy crisis fades, but higher gas prices stay

BRUSSELS (UPI) — With winter half over, the harsh restrictions imposed by the Arab oil embargo last fall have largely disappeared in Western Europe. But the backlash— higher fuel prices—apparently is here to stay.

Gone are most of the driving bans, fuel rationing and long queues at service stations. Motorists in most countries can buy all the gasoline they want if they can afford it.

Europe, dependent on the Middle East for 72 per cent of its oil, shuddered when Arab nations restricted the flow last year. The oil is flowing again, but its price has skyrocketed, and gasoline prices are up all over Western Europe.

In France, high octane fuel hit $1.40 a gallon in January. It was $1 a gallon in October. High test gasoline sells for $1.22 a gallon this month. Last August it was 88 cents.

Higher prices have produced a form of self rationing. People are making fewer trips to the grocery, take the bus to work and plan fewer weekend outings.

"It's one way of solving the shortage, I suppose," said Lenn Gibbs, a truck driver in Sussex, England. "Make the stuff so bloody expensive that no one can afford it. Then only the Rolls-Royce merchants will be out on the roads."

In Paris, a magazine poll found only one in four Parisians were driving less despite higher gasoline costs. But many more said they were putting off purchase of a new car, and others said their next car will be smaller.

Holland, West Germany, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Austria and Sweden—countries that quickly imposed gasoline rationing or no driving days when the energy crisis broke— have since abandoned them. Only Italy among the major oil consumers still has a driving ban, and the government has decided to replace it with a rationing program in May.

France never imposed gasoline rationing, but like several other nations has lowered speed limits to cut fuel consumption. The Prime Minister's office said this was partly responsible for a 9 per cent drop in French highway fatalities last year.

In West Germany, the only remaining signs of gasoline shortages are higher gasoline prices and speed limits of 100 kilometers (62 miles) per hour on the autobahns and 80 kilometers (48 miles) per hour on other roads. The government has indicated it will keep those limits because of the dramatic 45 per cent cut in highway fatalities.

In Britain, where the price for the cheapest gasoline has just gone up to $1.09 a gallon, there are fewer cars on the road and more parked on suburban streets.

Housewife Anne Millet of Dorking now walks the three miles from her home to the town's shopping center.

"The car's been in the garage for about three weeks now," she said. "We can't really afford to use it. But all this exercise is working wonders for my figure."

Andy Bowden, a Croydon electrician, used to drive to work from his home in Reigate but has found gasoline prices so high he now covers the 11 miles on a bicycle.

"I'm whacked by the time I get to work and with the weather we've been having I find myself hating the oil sheiks to hell and back," he said. "Still, when he was elected (Prime Minister Edward) Heath did say he'd get the country back on its feet and by God he's done it. There's more people walking than ever before."

Italy's driverless Sundays have brought a boon to family life, with fathers jogging with their children and families strolling through the piazzas. Young boys roller skate in the streets. The government has reported few violations of the driving ban.

The energy crisis has had little impact in Eastern Europe, where private automobiles are relatively rare and most countries are not tied to Arab oil. Bulgaria, Romania and other Soviet bloc countries get most of their oil from Russia. In Hungary, gasoline prices are the same as they were before the latest Middle East War.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI — It would cost $5 billion, but scientists conceivably could make radio contact with intelligent life on other planets, an astronomer from Cornell University declares.

Frank Drake, the astronomer, made his prediction recently at a symposium at the American Association for the Advancement of Sciences convention.

The money could finance Project Cyclops, a proposed array of 1,400 giant radio antennas which would scan the heavens for messages from space.

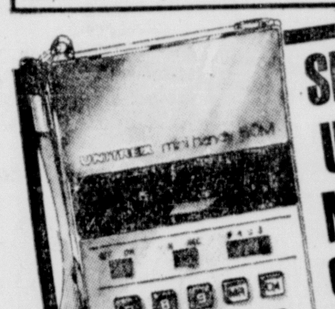

Drake contended that $5 billion would be "small compared to what we've spent already putting men on the moon and waging war."

Valley housing group to hold first meeting

POMONA — A meeting planned in Washington, D.C. between officials of the Pomona Valley area and the federal government on abandoned housing will be discussed at an organizational meeting here Friday of the Valley Association of Cities (VAC).

The association, with a potential membership of nine cities from Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties, is being formed to attack the problem of abandoned houses on a regional basis.

Banding together of the municipalities to more effectively cope with the problem was one of the recommendations made by a study committee made up of officials from Chino, Claremont, La Verne, Montclair, Ontario, Pomona, San Dimas, Upland and Walnut.

City councils in all cities except La Verne have adopted resolutions authorizing membership in VAC.

VAC's first meeting will be held in the City Hall boards and commissions room starting at 3 p.m. and is open to the public.

The agenda calls for the appointment of the association's chairman, vice chairman and executive officer, authorization to apply for certain consortium grants and establishment of the goals and budget for the period from March 1 to Aug. 31.

Discussions also are scheduled on the location of the association's offices, and on a program to implement area-wide solutions to abandoned housing.

Local officials are expected to meet in Washington with Jams T. Lynn, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and other federal officials.

The meeting is being arranged in conjunction with the eighth annual Congressional City Conference next week cosponsored by the National League of Cities and the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

The Pomona City Council Monday authorized the attendance of Mayor Ray J. Lepire, Vice Mayor Charles W. Bader, City Administrator Jerold Gonce and Asst. City Administrator Joseph Korpsak with funds from a federal grant on planning.

Other local cities also are expected to send representatives. Bader is acting chairman, and Korpsak, acting executive officer, for the association.

Because of the trip by the Pomona officials, the council meeting for Monday has been canceled.

Sixth-grade teacher Samuel Tharpe and school secretary Deborah M. Johnson are coordinating the affair with the assistance of Paula Johnson of Montclair High School.

Changes in school programs, hiring of minority administrators urged

POMONA — Eight spokesmen from seven community groups are calling for an upgrading of Pomona schools' educational programs for minority children and a balancing of minority educators at the administrative level.

Speakers pointed out to the school board Tuesday that while 27 per cent of the school district's enrollment is black and 23 per cent is brown, there are no minority educators holding cabinet-level positions.

Kathryn Hill, a parent and a staff member at South Hills Community Service Center, told the board "we seek the development of programs which encompass differences and language styles which students bring to school. We encourage building additional languages but not at the exqense of the eradication of the individual's home language pattern. Rejection of language styles is the rejection of the child.

"We transmit our culture through our language."

Mrs. Hill asked the board, "Why do we have 30 counselors and only five of them from the minorities when minority enrollment represents 49.6 per cent of our students?"

Mrs. Eddie Maria Patterson, president of the Pomona Valley Black Coalition, said coalition members are aware of and concerned about some conditions in the district and how these conditions are affecting black students.

As possible solutions, she recommended that the district continue to screen new employes "to make certain that all students, and especially black students, are exposed to sensitive, knowable educators."

She urged the school board to establish an Affirmative Action Program and upgrade the office of intergroup education.

Sixteen-year-old Jimmy Ramirez, a student at Pomona High School, said that "the Chicano, too, has problems in Pomona. We want teachers who look like us a little. We need to be able to get jobs, before and after graduation. Our parents care, they care a lot."

Ken Stewart spoke for the Community Educational Advisory Council of Pomona. He reported on two recent council meetings and said a major concern was "that the needs of the blacks (in the school district) seem to be the greatest due to the low self image created by the day to day low achievement, the continued increase of black students being expelled from the schools, the continued large numbers of black students being assigned to Park Avenue continuation school, and the increase of black gangs in Pomona."

He, too, urged the school board to establish an Affirmative Action Program to provide for the recruitment and hiring of minority and female employes at all levels, and that a director be employed to develop, implement and monitor the program.

Stewart said his group sought special programs to change the low achievement of black students with specialists in the area of black education. He urged that directors of intergroup education be elevated to cabinet status "to monitor the progress and development of all district programs, activities and policies related to multi-cultural education."

Herman Nelson was spokesman for Concerned Parents of South Pomona who criticized career education and physical education programs at Garey High School. He said it was the general concensus of the parents that "our problems are of a serious nature with the ultimate outcome being the continuation of educationally handicapped children."

Esther Landin, president of the Bi-Lingual Community Advisory Committee, asked for time to translate what was happening into Spanish, which she proceeded to do.

Mary Montes, speaking for The Group of Concerned Minority Community, charged that "if this administration was committed to excellence, excellence would prevail." She said Pomona school district has "a monocultural staff administering in a multicultural district."

She presented, using slides flashed on a screen, a chart for reorganization of administrative positions which called for the establishment of a position of assistant superintendent of multicultural education.

Gertha Speiginer, president of the Pomona Valley Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, charged the school board with not listening to the community.

"The time has come for the black community and the Chicano community to be heard," she said.

Pet distemper cases increase sharply in area

POMONA — Pet owners are being warned by the Humane Society of Pomona Valley to protect their animals against distemper.

Offices of local veterinarians currently are flooded with pets afflicted with deadly virus-bacteria infection, says Bruce Richards, executive director of the Human Society.

The percentage of pets with distemper increases during cold and damp months (December, January and February), with fewer cases during summer months. The society is handling 2½ times as many distemper cases this month as compared to a normal winter and seven times as many as during other months, Richards said.

Distemper in advanced stages has an 85 per cent mortality rate for dogs and 90 per cent for cats, he added. Prevention through vaccination has been nearly 100 per cent successful, however.

If a dog or kitten is listless, shows unaccountable loss of appetite and is reluctant to move, its owners should suspect distemper. In the later stages, mucus appears in the nose and eyes, the pet takes no food or water, and symptoms are accompanied by diarrhea, Richards noted.

Older cats, curiously, seem to build up an immunity to distemper. But Richards warns owners to take no chances, and vaccinate all cats and dogs who have not received shots in the past year.

Distemper is contagious, he added, and usually stays in an area for six to eight weeks.

In the Pomona area, it is particularly deadly in the foothills, where pets come in contact with wild animals such as coyotes and wildcats.

PAGEANT HOPEFULS Judy Stallings, 20, of Upland, at left, and Carol Wranosky, 18, of Montclair are among the 14 contestants who will vie March 8 for the title of Miss Pomona Valley. Miss Stallings attends Chaffey College while Miss Wranosky is a student at Montclair High School.

Contest to determine Miss Pomona Valley

POMONA — "Fifty Wonderful Years" will be the theme of the Miss Pomona Valley Pageant to be staged March 8.

A nostalgic look at the 50 years of the Miss California program will be reflected in stage settings, musical background and costuming for the parade of contestants which will open the pageant program.

Sheldon G. Wellins, pageant executive director, said the show this year, to be held in the Claremont Colleges' Garrison Theater, will be the most ambitious production planned since the start of the Pomona program.

Wellins will serve as master of ceremonies, and music will be provided by the Ralph Sappington Combo. Also entertaining will be Mrs. Helen Selby, the chaperone for the contestants.

Fourteen finalists in the pageant, a preliminary to the Miss California and Miss America pageants, will compete in evening gown, swimsuit and talent divisions.

The new Miss Pomona Valley, who will win a total of $500 in scholarships, will be crowned by last year's winner, Miss Pamela Sue Lambine.

Tickets for the 8 p.m. program are $2.50 and may be purchased at Buffums ticket office or at the theater box office.

More help for aged, disabled

Besides the Red Cross, other local agencies involved in the effort are the Head Start Program, the American Association of Retired Persons, the Pomona Valley Commission on Aging, the National Association of Retired Teachers, the National Adult Participation Program, Meals on Wheels, Pomona Community Relations, Economic Youth Opportunities Agency, Mexican American Opportunity Foundation, National Association of Retired Federal Employees, Los Angeles County Department of Senior Citizen Affairs, Los Angeles County Department of Public Social Services, the National League of Senior Citizens, the Pomona Ministerial Association and the South Hills Community Center.

Wounded clerk remains under intensive care

POMONA — Deborah Yang, 21-year-old woman shot during a holdup attempt here Monday night, remained in serious condition today in Pomona Valley Community Hospital's intensive unit.

Miss Yang was shot once in the left chest by one of two young men who apparently had intended to rob the 7-11 Market where she worked at 1550 Murchison Ave. The bullet narrowly missed her heart, authorities said.

Police today said they are continuing to check out leads but have made no arrests.

The victim, her sister, Elsie, 35, and their father, Tung Chi Yang, 61, were inside the store shortly before 11:30 when the youths entered. One demanded money and then unaccountably fired as Miss Yang moved toward the cash register. The pair fled on foot as the victim collapsed behind the counter.

Opinion

Oil shortage chills the Rising Sun

The Japanese, beset by oil shortages which could end their postwar economic miracle, are scrambling with customary ingenuity to offset the worst effects of the crisis. Leading Tokyo businessmen differ as to the prospects for success.

At a meeting with a small group of U.S. newsmen, a fairly optimistic note was struck by Yoshizane Iwasa, chairman of the powerful Fuji Bank. More negative in tone was Shigeo Nagano, board chairman of Nippon Steel Corporation.

Even Iwasa says Japan is working from two frames, one optimistic, the other pessimistic. The first assumes a 1974 growth in gross national product of just two to three per cent. The second assumes almost no growth at all. And this in a nation that has been spurting upward for years at an annual growth rate of 10 to 12 per cent.

The most severe problem confronting the country, which imports 99 per cent of its oil, is the zooming cost of it. In theory, the shortage could end tomorrow but nothing can wipe out the fact that Japan this year will have to pay nearly $16 billion for oil that in 1973 cost it $7.5 billion.

That added cost burden, plus several other economic imponderables which could go sour, provides the basis for the gloomier forecast which could produce a 1974 Japanese balance of payments deficit of $8 billion. It's a serious question as to how long Japan could bear such adversity.

Right now, say the two businessmen, the island nation has official foreign exchange reserves of $12 billion, plus another $6 billion described as "Hidden." The projected "worst deficit" would draw that total down to $10 billion, still a fairly safe margin. But a bad 1975 on top of a bad 1974 might put Japanese reserves in perilous condition.

What is the country doing to avert such a prospect? Faced with an inflationary spiral that could range from 10 to 15 per cent above 1973 price levels, the government of Prime Minister Tanaka has slapped on a tight money policy. The impact on Japan's domestic economy could be severe.

Caught by both higher gasoline prices and rising automobile prices, many Japanese simply aren't buying cars, either new or used. Iwasa says a lot of dealers are bankrupt.

The country was sadly short of good housing even in the best of times. The money curbs and inflation have dealt a heavy blow to plans for major expansion in this field.

Industrialist Nagano says Japan's mostly non-militant factory workers are being spurred toward a general strike this April, as labor mounts its yearly "spring offensive" for more pay. Organized in what we term company unions, usually docile and NOT subject to layoffs, workers seldom have caused big trouble. But inflation and shortages may have ripened many for the militants' message. Iwasa tends to disagree, saying labor won't make spring all that rough.

Its oil supplies down almost 20 per cent, Japan now imposes electric power cutbacks of 20 per cent on industrial and commercial users. They've avoided production cuts by applying more economy and efficiency in power use.

But, with a deliberate, anit-inflation hold-down on domestic demand, what becomes of sustained and thus partly excess output? Iwasa says the hope is to export move. Some export prices will be higher but a decline in the yen's value partly offsets higher production costs.

This cheerful outlook, however, is today more hope than substance. Japan could have a very uncomfortable year.

Win a few, lose a few

So many things seemed to come unglued last year that it's reassuring to be told that, in one very literal sense, the world was a very stable place.

The year 1973 was "a slow year for earthquakes," says the U.S. Geological Survey. There were only 11 major shocks (the long-term average is 18) and only 650 earthquake-related deaths were reported sharply down from 1972's figure of about 10,000.

But even as the Department of the Interior giveth, the Department of Commerce taketh away.

Last year was also "the year of the tornado," reports the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. A record high of 1,107 of the deadly twisters scourged the U.S. landscape last year, beating the previous record of 929 in 1967 by a breezy margin.

Thought for today

The world will never have lasting peace so long as men reserve for war the finest human qualities. Peace, no less than war, requires idealism and self-sacrifice and a righteous and dynamic faith. — John Foster Dulles, former U.S. Secretary of State.

Army's aquatic trucks that sink

WASHINGTON — Waste has reached its most alarming peak in the armed forces. In the name of defense, the brass hats have built planes that won't fly, torpedos that miss their targets, a space communications system that remains mute and automatic helicopters that fall automatically into the ocean.

Now the Army has ordered a staggering $91.8 million worth of aquatic trucks that sink. The order called for rugged, battlefield-worthy trucks with a "floating and swimming capability for crossing calm water barriers."

But on test runs, the drivers often found themselves in water above their ankles. Once the test observers stood by, mouths agape, as a huge tanker unit "Swamped and sank" in the Chesapeake Bay.

The swimming trucks, known in the Pentagon as "GOER Vehicles," were developed by and purchased from the Caterpillar Tractor Company. Each consists of a diesel engine tractor which pulls either an eight-ton cargo body, a 2-500-gallon tanker or a 10-ton wrecker.

The first test vehicles apparently performed reasonably well, according to Army documents, even during "field" trials in Vietnam. But now that they are being mass produced, they are falling apart.

Internal reports prepared by Col. Lewington Ponder of the Army's test and Evaluation Command state that "the safety of water operations is jeopardized by excessive steering angles; . . . inadequacy of the bilge pumps; water leakage through the axle housing shields; and unbalance caused by the . . . power package (on the wrecker)."

Therefore, counseled the colonel, "the vehicle (should) be prohibited from swimming until deficiencies . . . are corrected." If the Army insists on taking the aquatic trucks into the water, he wrote, only "well-trained and experienced driver personnel" should be used.

Presumably, he meant that the drivers should be able to swim.

The fact that the swimming trucks can't swim is but one of their many failures. The official report also lists these additional "deficiencies" and "shortcomings":

— "The service brake system is unreliable and unsafe when the vehicles are operated in relatively deep, cohesive mud."

— "The steering system is unreliable and under certain conditions constitutes a safety hazard."

—"The crane (on the wrecker) is unsafe and unreliable . . . due to tipping tendencies under certain . . . conditions."

— "The personnel heater did not properly heat the vehicle soft top enclosed cab or provide adequate windshield defrosting."

— "The alternator is not durable and requires excessive maintenance."

— "The noise level in the cab is a health hazard to both the driver and co-driver."

— "The transmission cover fasteners allow the cover to bounce free and strike the crew."

—"The tractor frame is not durable. The main frame structures cracked on four different vehicles."

— "The fan drive system design is inadequate . . . The transmission is not durable . . . The front axle design is inadequate . . . The fuel tanks are not durable."

Nevertheless, Army spokesmen insist they are pleased with the GOER trucks. Their "extensive testing program," they said, had produced "an impressive record of low maintenance, high reliability and long life." They described the documents we have quoted as an "interim report," which will be used "to assure that required corrections are made as early in the production process as possible."

A spokesman for Caterpillar told us the shortcomings revealed in tests weren't the result of a deficient vehicle but the normal problems of mass production. The truck that sank, he said, was the fault of the operator, not the vehicle.

But, meanwhile, the test reports show clearly that the swimming trucks, in their present conditions, can't swim safely.

FOOTNOTE: From military generals to carrier admirals, the brass hats have constantly clamored for pet weapons which have turned out to be impractical or obsolete. In some instances, their greatest value has been to give some military chief an excuse to demand more money, more men, more gold braid. Occasionally, the Defense Department has rushed ahead with new weapons before they have been proven. Its warehouses hold millions worth of spare parts for cancelled and antiquated weapons.

TRAFFIC SAFETY: While 55,000 Americans are dying every year in automobile accidents, the federal agency that looks after traffic safety is disregarding deadlines for drawing up safety regulations.

Ralph Nader, in a private letter to Administrator James B. Gregory of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, complained that it took a court order last year to force the agency to issue used-car and tire-quality inspection standards that should have come out in 1968-69.

A spokesman for Gregory told us that the agency lacks the funds and data to meet its deadlines. Nevertheless, it has often refused to ask for the full amount of money authorized by Congress for its work.

N.Y. tries to restyle country music

New York City does not represent the United States. If it were up to New York City, The Beverly Hillbillies would never have survived the first 13 weeks. If it depended on New York City ratings, The Waltons would have been canceled last year.

And New York City does not dig Country Music, either. And the city-slicker TV producers are about to rape another cowboy. Nashville's Grand Ole Opry has refused to mongrelize its particular art form — so you don't see it on any network.

Chicago's longtime Saturday Night Barn Dance was never aired beyond the local station. In the 1950s, an excellent country music program was created by Ralph Foster and televised from Springfield, Mo., the heartland of the Ozarks. It went great!

But its ratings were unimpressive in New York City so the network sent some dudes down to Springfield to "fix" the program. They fixed it.

They interspersed it with traditional nightclub acts, but seeking something for everybody pleased nobody. Similarly, in the Sixties, they turned Johnny Cash into a variety show emcee.

Manhattan Island has peculiar tastes. Yet, unfortunately, the junk the Times Square marquees say they like gets ventilated nationwide because the electronic media and most publishing and news media are headquartered there.

Now Greg Garrison, a talented displayer of showgirls, is producing a thing called Music Country, U.S.A. Chicago Tribune critic Gary Deeb asked Garrison what he knew about country music and Garrison candidly replied: "Nothing."

As with any other kind of music, one must have a "sensitivity" for it before he can appreciate its limitations. When Hollywood hacks get through with a Johnny Cash or a Charley Pride or a Hee-Haw, they've served up a mess of potage — incongruous, tacky.

Music Country, U.S.A., seeking to woo Manhattan's myopic critics, taped segments against such backgrounds as the Big Sur, the High Sierras and the Manhattan Island Ferry.

Again TV's network dandies are trying to spell "opry" with an "a", trying to restyle classic hillbilly ballads in the New York image. Real country music will still be here when today's network TV producers are long gone, but most of us miss the best of it unless we can go to where it is.

Only logical solution

The question of impeachment is a very serious one. Perhaps we aren't giving it enough thought. I am afraid that more and more Americans are becoming apathetic towards a matter that they should be greatly concerned about. One year of Watergate is not enough.

Many people think that impeachment means expelling the President from office. It does not. Impeachment is the bringing of charges in the House of Representatives. If the charges reach the floor and they vote in favor of impeachment then the Senate will sit in judgment of the trial. Only if a majority of the Senate finds him guilty can the President be expelled from office.

There is too much circumstantial evidence against the President to just forget the whole thing. The evidence now on file indicates that Richard Nixon did in fact know about and-or was involved in the Watergate break-in and attempted cover up. Mr. Nixon says he has evidence to prove his innocence but he refuses to release it to the courts.

The Watergate hearings became a folly with the massive perjury from former Nixon aides and Cabinet members. All of this cannot be ignored. Something must be done and impeachment is the only logical solution. If Mr. Nixon is guilty then he will be removed from office, and if he's innocent and this matter will be cleared up once and for all and he can direct his full attention to the business of running the government.—Bill Stegall, Cal Poly, Pomona.

Gossip for today

Once we sent missionaries to deepest, darkest Africa to show the natives the error of their ways. But now I am beginning to wonder if the time hasn't come for those natives to return the favor. As an indication of how far they have surpassed the teachers in a comprehension of what constitutes righteousness and justice, it is interesting to note that in east central Africa a girl can be sentenced to as long as two years in prison for wearing a miniskirt or tight pants.

INSIDE REPORT

Backlash feared if pay hikes ok'd

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — The terror of facing angry voters in the 1974 election after voting themselves a fat pay boost seems certain to force the Democratic Congress to delay the congressional salary boost until early 1975 in opposition to President Nixon's support for it now.

No issue has produced so much cloakroom anguish as the 1974 pay increase. Controlling Senate Democrats, however, now see possible political gain at Mr. Nixon's expense by postponing the congressional part of the increase while letting admittedly overdue increases for federal judges and middle-to-top level federal employes take effect April 1.

The pay boost is politically explosive. Polls show voter approval of Congress as an institution at an all-time low of 20 per cent — lower than even the President's standing.

Hence, Democratic Congressmen are terrified at the prospect of campaigning this fall after raising their own pay from the present $42,500 to $45,700 (which would increase in steps to $52,800 by 1976).

Either House can kill the President's proposals by simple majority vote. By taking that course, Democrats can blame the President for the non-congressional raises while telling voters they refused to raise their own pay in 1974, despite 30 per cent inflation since the last increase.

That argument is reinforced by this little-known fact: of the President's seven-member salary commission, the only two who opposed all raises (costing $34 million the first two years) were Democrats — lawyers Edward H. Foley of Washington, D.C., and Joseph F. Meglen of Billings, Mont.

A House resolution to killl all raises is not expected to reach the floor by the March 9 deadline. But Sen. Gale McGee of Wyoming, chairman of the Senate Post Office Committee, will probably beat the Senate deadline with a resolution postponing the congressional raise. That is expected to pass, giving Democrats yet another issue for 1974.

A footnote: A politically sensitive provision that Democrats will let go into effect April 1, buried in the President's pay-increase proposals, would raise Mr. Nixon's own retirement pay from the present $60,000 to $64,500. That results from a Nixon administration first-term bill raising annual retirement pay of ex-Presidents from $25,000 to the pay of a cabinet member. The new pay raises will lift cabinet members to $64,500.

The tape experts

Aggravation over the way court-appointed experts have investigated the 18½-minute erasure is not limited to the White House but also includes the special prosecutor's office.

Special prosecutor Leon Jaworksi's lieutenants are privately confident the panel of experts ultimately will be upheld in rejecting White House claims that the 18½-minute buzz on the June 20 tape was accidental. But the prosecutors are grumbling that the experts let themselves in for unnecessary criticism.

The prosecutors agree with one point by Nicholas Wade's article in the Feb. 22 Science magazine which criticizes the experts: the panel should not have submitted its Jan. 15 press release explaining the erasure without accompanying technical details.

That breach of scientific procedure was caused by pressure from Judge John Sirica to report quickly. But the experts may not have completed the technical report because they spent too much time on private business pursuits and not enough on their court-appointed task.

A footnote: The technician whose findings are reported in Science magazine — Allan D. Bell, president of Dektor Counterintelligence and Security, Inc. — is not Mr. Nixon's technical expert on the tapes. Just assigned that role is Dr. Michael Hecker, senior research engineer at Stanford (Calif.) Research Institute who flew here Thursday to confer with Nixon lawyer James St. Clair.

Labor's political pains

Pennsylvania labor leaders, in hot water for endorsing liberal Republican Sen. Richard Schweiker's reelection, failed in a backstage attempt to get the AFL-CIO's national political operatives to bail them out.

The heat has been on Michael Johnson, executive vice president of the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO and a member of the Democratic National Committee. He engineered a state AFL-CIO endorsement of Schweiker before the Democrats knew what happened.

Democratic politicians and even some labor leaders were outraged, feeling that Watergate has made any Republican — even the highly popular Schweiker — vulnerable. Some liberal Democrats contend Johnson should lose his seat on the Democratic National Committee for the apostasy.

Making Johnson's position even shakier is the fact that one of Pennsylvania's most dynamic figures — Herbert Denenberg, who as state insurance commissioner is a nationally renowned consumer advocate — may seek the Democratic nomination for Senator.

Property owners in development area will meet

SAN DIMAS — Property owners in the special planned development area will meet next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall to help formulate goals and objectives of the area.

The area is located between Bonita Avenue, Arrow Highway, San Dimas Avenue and Eucla Avenue. It is designated as a special planned area in the new general plan.

This designation indicates that at some future date a special study would be undertaken for the entire area, according to Planning Director Mark Goldberg.

Residents upset over prospect of housing tract

SAN DIMAS — About 30 residents who live in the area surrounding the 40-acre Namimatsu Strawberry Farm on East Base Line Road are apparently concerned over a proposal to build homes on the land.

The residents attended a City Council public hearing Monday night but were unable to testify when the zone case was held over until March 11. The applicant, Leadership Housing Systems Inc. of Santa Ana, is conducting a survey that will depict what the noise impact of the proposed development will be on the surrounding neighborhood Because of a delay, the noise element wasn't completed for Monday night's meeting.

The applicant wants a change of zone from agriculture zoning to residential use for a 25-acre parcel and an adjacent 14 acres.

Student center to be dedicated

LA VERNE — The futuristic La Verne College Student Center, the first permanent fabric-roofed structure in the country, will be officially dedicated Saturday at 2 p.m.

More than 1,000 visitors and professional people from throughout the country, including Dr. Harold Gores, president of the Ford Foundation's Education Facilities Laboratory which helped finance the building, will be on hand to mark the 18-month, $3-million project.

Also present will be La Verne President Leland B. Newcomer; architect John Shaver; Max Tadlock, educational planner; Robert Johnson, vice president of the contracting firm of Stolte, Inc., and representatives of Owens-Corning Fiberglas, the Dupont Co., Sippican Corp., Birdair Structures and the Chemical Fabrics Corp.

"Our new student center," said Newcomer, "moves La Verne College into the educational future. It's a multipurpose educational facility, one that was economical to build, yet flexible enough to accommodate our ever-changing undergraduate programs and activities."

Referred to by students as "Super Tent" and by college officials as "encapsulated space," the Teflon-coated Fiberglas-roofed building will provide a two-story facility to house athletic activities, fine arts and crafts work, student government and campus media offices, and a variety of student leisure and social activities.

Also atending the ceremonies will be Howard Beckner, a trustee and chairman of the Campus Planning Committee; Mrs. Mary E. La Fetra, president of the board of trustees; and Truman Northup, executive secretary of the Pacific Southwest Conference of the Church of the Brethren.

Border Patrol looking for answer to gypsy invasion

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — The Border Patrol is looking for a crystal ball that will reveal just how 102 Gypsies from various parts of Europe appeared in the southern Arizona desert one night.

The gypsies—half of them young children—are being held as illegal aliens.

The Border Patrol suspects they may be concealing the operations of a wide-ranging ring that illegally brought them to the United States by way of Montreal, Mexico City and a midnight ride across the border.

Assistant Chief Border Patrol Agent William Selzer said Tuesday he doubts the gypsies' story that they made it across the border by hiring smugglers in Nogales, Mexico, just across the boundary from Nogales, Ariz. They said they bumped into the helpful smugglers by happenstance.

"That can't be so. This had to be planned in Europe," he said.

"I'm puzzled because I don't know how they got everyone from Europe together all of a sudden in Nogales—this took some planning."

The Gypsies are apparently from seven families, he said, and speak a number of languages, Serbo-Croatian, Spanish, Italian, German, indicating many places of origin. They range in age from 2 to 72, and half are under 12.

Selzer's district already has a sizable problem with illegal border crossers from Mexico and from other Latin American nations who come to Mexico to try to get into the United States.

"We don't want to be inundated every week with 100 Europeans," he said.

The mustachioed leader of the gypsies, Ivan Gorg Konovalov, said the group flew from Holland to Montreal, then flew to Mexico City and made their way more than 1,000 miles northward to Nogales.

They paid the smugglers about $8,500 to sneak them across the border, he said, because they want to live in the United States and become rich.

The Gypsies appeared Sunday. The Border Patrol first noticed groups of them straggling out of the desert near an old Spanish mission in the region of Tumacacori, 40 miles south of Tucson. Others were sighted trekking along the road to Phoenix, and others in a bus station in Tucson.

The Gypsies told interpreters they had been jammed into pickup trucks, as many as 40 to a vehicle, for a rough ride through the desert to a point where only a few strands of barbed wire mark the border. The smugglers had guns and robbed them, the gypsies said, but the Border Patrol said many of the women had large amounts of currency, mostly U.S. dollars, hidden in their long, full skirts. One had $1,700.

Selzer said the Gypsies may have been warned that if they revealed the operations of an international alien smuggling ring they would be killed. Some such rings promise "clients" that if they get caught by U.S. authorities but keep quiet, they will be resmuggled back over the border, for free, following deportation from the United States, Selzer said.

A hearing is to be held into the gypsies' status March 12.

Santa Monica Douglas plant to be closed

HUNTINGTON BEACH (UPI — The Santa Monica, Calif. plant of McDonnell Douglas, birthplace of the famous Douglas DC3 that became a military and civilian work horse, will be closed July 1, 1975.

The company has announced the 124-acre site would be phased out "in the interest of greater efficiency and economy to meet the demands of the highly competitive aerospace environment."

Douglas Aircraft, founded in 1920 by Donald W. Douglas Sr., made the Santa Monica location its main plant in 1929. The site served as corporate headquarters until the firm merged with McDonnell Company in 1967.

The plant grew to 40,000 workers during World War II as three shifts turned out the C47, a military version of the DC3, and the A20 attack bomber.

But current employment shrank to only 2,800 from a postwar peak of 27,880 in 1958 when the company was building both commercial aircraft and missiles at the plant.

Now the plant, with its more than three million square feet of buildings, is used to make aircraft and missile parts.

Bell of Cincinnati to start it

Phone information soon to cost 20 cents

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Pam Sanders is one of 370 telephone operators here who do nothing but handle the monthly load of more than 2.25 million "directory assistance" calls.

"Almost all the calls I get are for numbers in the phone book," says Pam, who estimates she talks to 600 callers each three-hour work split. "I try to be diplomatic and say, 'the number is listed as ....' but what I really mean is, 'next time look in your book!' "

Callers may start looking in the book because soon it's going to cost 20 cents to get the number from Pam or another information operator here.

Beginning Sunday, the Cincinnati Bell Telephone Co. will allow its customers only three free information calls a month within the large southwestern Ohio area code of 513, and then charge 20 cents for all subsequent requests.

And if you dial "O" for the regular operator and request a phone number, it will cost you 40 cents because two operators will be involved.

Cincinnati Bell, which serves about a half-million customers, is believed to be the first phone company in the nation to charge such a fee. It could be the start of a national trend since other phone companies across the country have filed similar requests with their state utility commissions.

But the move by Cincinnati Bell has not been without opposition.

A citizens protest is being led by Jim Howard Witt, a suburban Fairfield radio news director, who believes his "citizens for fair telephone rates" group is the only stopgap in what he calls the "Telephone Domino Theory."

"If it's allowed to start here, then the whole country will follow," says Witt. "I think getting a number from the operator is something that should go along with the telephone service."

Most Icelanders are descended from ancient Norse and Celtic settlers of the island. No Eskimos live there.

Bill penalizes those misusing food stamps

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A bill establishing new criminal penalties for persons who misuse federal food stamps has advanced to the Assembly floor.

The bill (SB1253) by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-Tiburon, cleared the Asembly Criminal Justice Committee Tuesday

Penalties under the measure would range up to three years in state prison and a maximum fine of $1,000 for persons who fraudulently use food stamps. The bill permits a person caught misusing food stamps for the first time to make restitution.

Prison cat may get parole

McLESTER, Okla. (UPI) — Canteen Tom, a riot-scarred cat willing to stand his ground against the finest the police canine corps has to offer, may find a new home as a "watchcat" in Connecticut.

Warden Sam Johnston of the Oklahoma State Penitentiary will meet today with prison inmates to consider the many offers received for the cat. They began pouring in Tuesday, the day a letter written by a prison inmate seeking a new home for Tom was published.

The most promising offer came from Michael Ranciato, manager of the Mr. Fireplace store in New Haven, Conn., who offered to donate $8 a month to a prison inmates fund if Canteen Tom would become a watchcat in his warehouse.

Johnston said the final decision will be up to the prisoners. "These inmates grow pretty fond of their mascots," he said. "It will be up to them to decide."

According to the letter written by Charles Stotts and mailed to United Press International, Canteen Tom has the mental qualifications for the job.

"Tom don't act much like a cat, he seems to have more personality characteristics of a dog," Stotts wrote. "He doesn't like to be handled so he could never live around small children. He is too independent to make a good pet. However, he'd make someone a pretty good friend."

Canteen Tom was born July 25, 1967, and has spent all his life within the walls of the state prison. On July 17, 1973, the day the prison was torn by riots, Tom saw his first dogs— two members of the Tulsa Police Departments' canine corps.

"As Tom reigned king of the yard for six years, he was not going to be intimidated by a couple of intruders," Stotts wrote. "Namely, one Doberman and one German shepherd. It was evident that Tom had intentions of attacking the dogs when several of us intervened and chased him away before he committed suicide.

Reagan kept on move by his schedule

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan said Tuesday he was turning off lights in his home and had set the thermostat down to conserve energy, but said he did not have "too much" control over his widespread travels.

Reagan was quizzed about his personal efforts to cut back fuel consumption during a question-and-answer session with high school students.

"Well now, I don't have too much to say about my traveling so I can't do too much about that. That's one thing that goes with this job," he replied.

"Everyday there is a piece of paper that comes out and I look at it and it tells me what I'm going to do every 15 minutes and half-hour for the whole day. Scheduling is done on that basis."

Reagan twice so far this year has made Republican fundraising tours through various southern and eastern states and has a third trip planned next month.

The governor's schedule for this year shows he spent every weekend at least since Jan. 8 out of the capital, either on one of the tours or at his Pacific Palisades home.

Reagan added that turning off more lights and setting down the thermostat in his home has "made quite a difference."

May shut down in fall

Bay Area transit in deep financial woes

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The financially troubled Bay Area Rapid Transit District will shut down next fall unless it receives an aadditional $13 million, BART officials have warned.

BART General Manager B.R. Stokes said the amount of aid needed will increase to $28 million by 1978. He recommended extension of the special one-half-cent sales tax levy in the BART counties — San Francisco, Alameda and Contra Costa—for two to five years to provide the needed funds.

'We are now in the position of having to find help no later than this summer in order to avoid cessation of our service this fall," Stokes told the Senate Public Utilities Commitee.

Quntin L. Kopp of San Francisco, a member of the BART board of directors, also said the district's staff has privately predicted service beneath the San Francisco Bay will not be ready by September as has been stated publicly.

Delay of the transbay service would worsen the district's financial plight by $1.5 milion a month, Stokes said.

Nelo Bianco, president of the BART directors, said, 'I'm here to tell you BART needs help. And without help, we'll have to shut down the system.'

The directors have taken no position on extending the half-cent sales tax, which is expected to end by December 1975.

Sen. Milton Marks, R-San Francisco, and Senate President Pro Tem James R. Mills, D-San Diego, expressed reluctance to approve an extension of the sales tax. Mills said the BART counties should be responsible for making up the district's deficit.

Stokes said the delay in starting transbay service has been a "major" source of financial problems. Other sources included inflation, cost of the BART police force and higher maintenance costs.

The commitee will hold another hearing on Bart's problems next Tuesday.

Unemployment termed way to halt inflation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns says "a temporary period" of high unemployment and little economic growth is necessary to bring inflation under control.

"I think the period can be brief," Burns said in testimony Tuesday before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

"I think we can end inflation over the next two or three years without going through a protracted period of high unemployment," Burns said. But that to control inflation, the country must "put up with a temporary period of low economic growth and high unemployment."

"I'm afraid we'll just have to take that," he said.

The search for open gas stations

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — "The dog got hurt and I couldn't take him to the vet because we were out of gasoline," lamented Mrs. Shirley Markuson, a young housewife with four children.

"Now," she said' "I'm wondering what would happen if the school called to say one of my children is sick or hurt and has to go to the hospital."

The Markusons—husband Art, 38, is a Westinghouse engineer —own two of the estimated three million motor vehicles registered in Maryland. They and others have had to go to outrageous extremes to obtain gasoline this month because the state's fuel supplies were almost depleten.

Fortunately for the Markusons, each have compact autos—but one is almost out of gas and the other is disabled.

Eleven-year-old Doug Markuson owns a $400 motorbike, but its gas tank has been empty for weeks.

"Doug told his father the other night, 'Dad, this gas situation is just killing me,'" Mrs. Markuson said. "He wants to know why he can't get just one gallon of gas a week. How can you explain something so ridiculous to a youngster?"

'GOING MY WAY'—College student at Mt. Hood Community College in Gresham, Ore., stands at 'share-the-ride station on campus which college officials say are working great. With shortage of gasoline, more students are taking the bus and using these stations. Average wait for a ride is five minutes.

There were, she said, "30 different things I could have done today, but couldn't because we couldn't get gas."

"Admittedly, I don't have to go to the store every day, but things come up. With four children, you never know when you're going to run out of milk or bread. It's 10 miles to the nearest shopping center whose markets have the most reasonable prices. It's another 10 miles to the cleaners.

"That's a 40-mile roundtrip right there. I could drive 25 to 30 miles a day just attending to essentials."

But the Markusons and most other Maryland motorists were conserving what little gas they had to search for service stations that were opening only from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., or from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m., if at all.

Only about 75 of metropolitan Baltimore's 1,500 stations opened at all late last week.

Unlike others, the Markusons have so far refused to join motorists who park their cars at closed service stations at night so they could be the first in line when, and if, the pumps were unlocked the next morning to sell gas ranging in price from 50 to 70 cents a gallon.

"You're talking to a middle class American who would like to see who can still afford to buy groceries once the price of gas goes to 95 cents or $1 a gallon," Mrs. Markuson said.

No way to flee the flu

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

Today let's discuss women taking showers, shall we?

Hearing no general shout of dissent, we will first consider the. . .I'm just kidding. I don't know any women. Who take showers.

Having thus rather underhandedly caught your attention, I would like to say something abut the Malthusian Theory of Over-population —which may or may not have anything to do with women in showers. The doctirine states that population tends to increase faster than the means of subsistence, resulting in an inadequate supply of food and necessary goods unless war, famine or disease reduce the population. What I would like to say about the theory of Thomas Robert Malthus (1766-1834), English economist and clergyman, is—it stinks.

This ringing socio-economic rebuttal leads us by the simple logic of rhetoric to—are you ready for this?—the flu. (Well, it's hard to catch people's interest.)

Flu. Lot of that going around, the doctors always say soothingly. You're supposed to be consoled if you know your neighbors are dropping like flies. I suppose doctors said it when the bubonic plague hit London—"Lot of that going around now. Take two aspirin and call me in the morning if you're still alive."

Flu (short for inFLUenza, get it?) is so widespread these days it's commoner than the common cold. Actually it IS a cold, but it is much tonier to say flu. Peasants have colds. Nobility has the same running noses, coughs, and aching bones, but they call it influenza. Virus is even more elegant.

The common flu is quite easy to get. Or catch. Or come down with. Takes no practise at all. Any number can play. All you have to do is be among the ambulatory between Halloween and the virginal equinox. First the tickle in the throat, then the clogged head like that man on TV with the disposal in his face, then your eyes are running like a housewife watching As the World Turns. Now your nose joins the fun, and Kleenex stock soars on the Big Board. You alternately cough, sneeze and swear. Life is just a bowl of cherry cough syrup.

Modern medicine, which can stop polio, do heart transplants and perform miracles of brain surgery, can do nothing about the common cold. It's so common even the doctors catch it. (Gets pretty chilly out on the golf course in the late afternoon.) If we can put a man in the Mayo, why can't we cure influenza?

There are many things you can "do for a cold." There are cough drops and lozenges, nose spray, syrups, tonics, hists and antihists. All are equally ineffective.

From long experience I have found there is only one thing to do when the wheezles and sneezles set in. Take to your bed with a mystery novel and a jug of hot toddy or some equally potent pinch-bottle panacea. It does nothing for your cold, but after awhile you don't care.

AMA reports labels on pill bottles unclear

CHICAGO (UPI) — Labels on pill bottles don't always tell it like they should, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported today.

The magazine said its studies of presciptions reading, Take three times a day, with meals, "is ambiguous because the instructions do not tell whether the tablets should be taken before, during or after the meal.

Yet, it makes a difference when the pills are taken, since some are intended to be consumed on a full stomach and others on an empty stomach to facilitate absorption.

The article cited a study made at a hospital in Rochester, N. Y., in which 67 patients were asked to interpret instructions on each of 10 prescription labels.

"Not once was a label uniformly interpreted by all patients," the study found.

The article said results of he study "illustrate the need for physicians to provide the medication instructions that are consistent with the patient's daily activities and to review these instructions with the patient."

Patients also were advised to ask their doctors to clarify instructions and to avoid guesswork for best results.

Why a tiger beats a lion

That the typical tiger is a fiercer fighter than the typical lion is common knowledge. Less widely known is what gives that tiger the advantage. Simple thing. The lion stands on three paws to maul with the fourth. But the tiger balances itself on its hind legs to maul with both front paws simultaneously. Moment by moment, the fighting paws on the tiger's side generally outnumber the fighting paws on the lion's side by two to one.

Sir, the upwind side of the lake is invariably gentler, isn't it? Much more comfortable. Too bad. Because the bumpy nasty downwind side of the lake is where you can expect to catch the trout. Studies by experts prove that. Sorry.

SINGER

Q. "All right, Louie, who's been the most popular singer in the history of this country?"

A. Little obvious, that. Bing Crosby, certainly. For that matter, can't you credit Bing as the most popular singer so far in the history of the world? Think so.

Marryingest people in the world are the Liberians. Exactly 38 out of every 1,000 wed annually there. That's a remarkably high matrimonial rate, by friend. The U.S. Virgin Islands have the second highest rate in the world, but it's only 19.3 marriages for every 1,000 people.

It's no longer true that a savvy crook invariably can pick out a plainclothes policeman in any crowd of civilians. Such was the case once, however. Nothing remarkable about why. Most police departments of any size for many years required all their officers to sport regulation haircuts.

INSOMNIA

Forget the name of the picture, but Joan Crawford starred, as I recall, and one series portrayed her in bed, grimacing in some lip bitten misery, unhappy so therefore a wide-eyed insomniac. Somebody got that wrong. A medical man of national renown says you don't suffer insomnia because you're unhappy. On the contrary, he contends, the unhappier people leap to sleep more swiftly than most. To escape. And they stay asleep longer, too, usually.

Women's slack are hung by the waist. Men's trousers are hung by the cuffs. Why is that? So asks a customer. I've researched this matter extensively. And only one explaination jumps forth repeatedly. Women do most of the hanging up. And men's pockets carry most of the household's loose change.

Coffee shop survives

Milt smiling again-- Route 99 traffic up

BAKERSFIELD (UPI) — The energy crisis has returned the smile to Milt Huggs' face, especially when he talks about business.

Milt's Coffee Shop is just now beginning to recover from the heavy losses suffered four years ago when Interstate 5 was opened and truck traffic along California 99 nearby disappeared.

But with the trucks returning to "99" Milt is even thinking about a new coffee shop and a diner. "I can't sit still, even though I may be taking a chance," Huggs said.

When I-5 opened, the fast, lonely superhighway linking Los Angeles and San Francisco lured motorists and truckers away from the slower state highway that runs past Milt's shop.

Six months later "99" was a 'ghost road" and stores and stations closed. The neon promises of hot coffee and full tanks died.

But the fuel shortage has drawn drivers, and especially truckers, away from the sparsely serviced superhighway and back to "99" with its clutter of service stations and truck stops.

Truckers say the new 55 mile per hour speed limit helped by turning I-5 into a "speed trap" strictly montored by the California Highway Patrol. Truckers on 99 say they can — and do—drive a little faster.

"There are more stations open in the towns along 99 . . . while along I-5, you may have to go three miles off the road to find a station at all," one patrolman said.

Meanwhile Huggs' business creeps back to normal after suffering a 25 pr cent drop when I-5 opened. He gives the credit to the truckers.

"About 60 per cent of my business at the coffee shop is truckers," he said. "They stop here to eat because they believe they can get their fuel here, too."

And usually they can. Milt's shop is next to a truck stop that seldom runs out of fuel.

Yellow fever fears ease for Panama

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — Health Minister Dr. Abraham Saied said Monday that the possibility of an epidemic of urban yellow fever in Panama City was "highly improbable" following mass vaccinations and a drive to eradicate the disease's carrier.

Saied confirmed the death of an adult male last week from jungle yellow fever. This is the first yellow fever fatality reported in Panama since 1948. Another person stricken with this variety of the deadly disease is on his way to full recovery, the minister said.

Essentially there is no difference between jungle and urban yellow fever, except in the type of mosquito that transmits the disease. In the case of jungle yellow fever, the disease is trasnmitted by the Haemagogus mosquito that lives among monkeys.

In the case of urban yellow fever, however, the vector is the Aedes Aegypti mosquito, which has reinfested parts of Panama City. Saied said a renewed effort to eradicate the mosquito begun last October reduced its incidence to .3 per cent in the area where it had been detected.

Last week thousands of residents of Panama City queued up to be inoculated against yellow fever at a dozen medical stations around the city. A permanent, 24-hour medical post was set up on the highway leading to the area of Eastern Panama where jungle yellow fever was contracted.

Can't beat city hall

BUENA PARK, Calif. (UPI) — Norman Fullman applied to the Veteran's Administration for a disability pension, 20 years after his army discharge, for a disease he contracted that leaves him "constantly weak."

It took him two months to get approval of a monthly payment of $131.

The first month, no check arrived. Nor the second month. Fullman complained to the VA. It took six months for the first check to arrive.

The check was for five cents.

"I don't know when all this will be straightened out," he said Wednesday. "But I know that if I was even two days late showing up when they drafted me, they'd have put me in the klink for six months, and when I'm late paying my taxes, I get fined."

Tops poll

Sen. Mondall moves up in Demo picture

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An intriguing poll has surfaced which should lend encouragement to the fledgling presidential ambitions of Sen. Walter F. Mondale.

What it indicates is that Mondale, the Minnesota Democrat, is winning favor with the party politicians.

The poll was conducted by Martin Hauan, former Director of Public Affairs and Research for the Democratic National Committee, who now runs an ad agency in Oklahoma City.

He has been running a continuing poll of Democratic leaders and the last time sent out 230 ballots to national committeemen, committeewomen, state chairmen, and governors. One hundred and six responded.

The poll showed that Mondale has emerged as the leader among possible and potential candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination.

According to Hauan, Mondale surged from 17 per cent support in the last poll, held in October, to 24 per cent, jumping from fourth to first place.

Hauan said several of those who participated in the poll indicated a desire for a "new face."

In the latest rankings, Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., tie for second at 19 per cent and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey is fourth with 14 per cent.

This contrasts with the October poll which had Kenndy leading at 24 per cent, followed by Humphrey at 23 per cent, Jackson, 22 per cent, and Mondale 17 per cent.

Hauan noted in releasing the current poll that it was taken before "Sen. Jackson's wide media exposure as champion of consumers against pricing practices."

Others who received support were Maine's Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, 11 per cent; Indiana's Sen. Birch Bayh, 7 per cent; Wisconsin's Sen. William Proxmire, 2 per cent; and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace received one vote.

Sen. George S. McGovern, the 1972 Democratic presidential candidate, received only five per cent.

The Hauan poll contrasts with national surveys of voters where names like Kennedy, Jackson, Humphrey, and Muskie have far greater recognition than Mondale, who has not had national exposure.

But Mondale, who is the only Democrat to at least set up an exploratory mission to determine if he should run, apparently is making points with the party polls.

Solon aim to block cut in vet pensions

WASHINGTON (UPI — Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott and Rep. Michael J. Harrington, D-Mass., backed legislation Monday that would protect veterans and their widows against a cutback in pensions because of the 11 per cent boost in Social Security benefits this year.

"As the law now stands, when Social Security benefits go up, veterans' benefits go down," Harrington said, announcing plans to introduce a bill to close the legal loophole.

Scott said he was "alarmed and astounded" to discover that the two-step Social Security increase Congress recently approved, to go into effect in April and July, would be considered added income this year for computing veterans' benefits for next year.

Harrington said the result would be to reduce the benefits of 1,331,800 veterans and widows, and eliminate benefits altogether for an additional 15,700.

"This is neither just, nor what the Congress intended when it increased Social Security benefits in light of rampaging inflation," Harrington said. His bill, he said, would guarantee veterans and widows the benefits "they by right have earned."

Donations accepted for Sandoval grant

CHINO — Donations are now being accepted for the Arturo Sandoval Memorial Scholarship Fund, according to Marcel Soriano, a Chino High School counselor and scholarship chairman.

Soriano explained that the fund is being established as a memorial tribute to the 17-year-old Chino High junior who recently died after being struck by a car in a local shopping center parking lot. The youth's death followed a conflict between Mexican-American and Anglo youths.

"There is no misfortune that does not carry within it the seed of hope, and the potential for greater good," Soriano said. "The tragedy of Arturo Sandoval must be seen as the seed which will ultimately bear the fruit of social cooperation and human understanding."

Soriano reported that teachers, students and parents are helping in the formation of the scholarship. He asked that individuals as well as service clubs and organizations make contributions to the fund.

"Through this scholarship we are dedicated to the edification of constructive means to rectify grievances. We seek to build bridges among people rather than walls," he continued.

"We are among those who believed in Art's potential . . . and would like to see others take his place and actualize his or her potential; thereby giving pride to the community," he concluded.

Contributions may be made to the Arturo Sandoval Scholarship Fund, care of Chino High School, Chino 91710. Envelopes should be marked to the attention of Soriano, scholarship chairman. Those wishing additional information may contact Soriano, 628-1201 Ext. 33.

Probe still on in theft of machine

ONTARIO — Ontario police are continuing their investigation into the theft of a 900-pound Rotab machine, valued at over $3,500, from the General Electric Co. plant at Ontario International Airport.

The theft was discovered Monday and reported to police.

In a Progress-Bulletin story appearing Tuesday it was erroneously reported that a General Electric Co. purchasing agent, Ray Seguy, was a representative of the Wolfe Machiner Co., where the stolen machine was discovered.

It was Seguy, after talking with a representative of the Wolfe Machinery Co., who discovered that the machine, missing since last month from the G.E. plant had been stolen. The Wolfe Machinery Co. told Seguy it had purchased the machine from a man from another company for $1,200, and called to ask if G.E. would sell the accessory parts to the machine.

Newsprint costs rise

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The price of newsprint will be increased from $185.62 to $198.02 per ton in the western U.S. soon as the result of a Canadian price increase, Crown Zellerbach Corp. announced today.

The company said the Cost of Living Council has approved the "averaging" price system under which Canadian price increases are reflected in the U.S. price in proportion to the quantity of Canadian newsprint being delivered in the U.S. marketing area.

Hearing set in candidate ballot issue

POMONA — Mrs. Georgia Grove, a candidate for city councilman from the 1st District who has been disqualified from having her name appear on the ballot for the April 16 special election, has retained Chino attorney Bill McVittie to represent her.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled Friday in Pomona Superior Court on a petition filed by former Mayor James Baker, an attorney, for a writ of mandate to have the ballot carry the names of Mrs. Grove, Thomas Fisher Hughes and Carl Jackson.

Hughes also was disqualified from running as a formal candidate. Jackson first was disqualified but later was ruled eligible to have his name appear on the ballot.

2 bits give arched effect

In the show ring, many types of gaited horses are shown with a full bridle, which is equipped with two kinds of bits —the snaffle bit, used to raise a horse's head, and a curb bit, used to tuck its chin in, thereby creating the arched neck effect.

Groups favor police retirement changes

UPLAND — Directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the Upland Teachers Association have unanimously endorsed the proposed new police retirment plan on the March 5 municipal election ballot.

If approved, the new plan would replace a 30-year-old retirement system that supporters say penalizes officers who serve the longest and prevents the department from attracting and retaining younger, qualified police officers.

The plan essentially calls for all officers to accumulate retirement benefits at a consistent rate of two per cent for every year of service, regardless of the age at which they joined the force.

In order to implement the $44,000 plan, passage of the measure would require a city tax rate increase of 5.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

A citizens committee of educators, businessmen and off-duty police personnel has been actively campaigning in favor of the new plan.

A final educational effort will be made Saturday with information tables set up in the parking lots of Alpha Beta market on West Foothill Boulevard and State Broters on North Mountain Avenue.

Institute plans science parley

CLAREMONT — The Blaisdell Institute will present "Science and Human Potential," a series of lectures and seminars open to the public, March 7-28 on the campuses of the Claremont Colleges.

The first guest speaker will be geneticist Theodosius Dobzhansky, who will talk on "Genetic Diversity and Human Equality" Thursday, March 7, at 7:30 p.m. in Galileo Hall at Harvey Mudd College.

The Russian-born scholar will also hold a seminar there the following afternoon at 4 on "Genetics of Reactions of Drosphila to Light and Gravity."

He will be followed by bacteriologist Rene Dubos of Rockefeller University, who will deliver a lecture and conduct two seminars at Claremont March 18-20. Psychologist Ira Progoff will conclude the program with a lecture March 28.

Advise your fuel handler

Keep your distributor advised. Farmers were given this advice to assure themselves an adequate fuel supply for agricultural production.

"Unless a local distributor or dealer knows what his farm customer requires, that distributor can't take the necessary steps to get enough fuel for him," said Lee Seidell of the state agricultural stabilization and conservation service.

"Informing the distributor becomes even more important if a farmer intends to increase his acreage considerably or wants to expand his dairy, poultry or other farm operations," he added. "Local dealers need this information to request additional fuel from their suppliers."

Scouts flunk cooking test

SANDPOINT, Idaho (UPI) — Some 140 Boy Scouts and their leaders flunked an outdoor test in cooking and had to repair to the kitchen.

The youths tried to barbecue a turkey at a campout but the bird just wasn't responding to the embers. So—using their ingenuity—they carted the turkey to a nearby ranchhouse where the farmer's wife cooked it in a radar range.

MORY'S MOURNED — Mory's Tavern in New Haven, Conn., put to tune and tome by Yale men and to the test by women's libbers, has lost one of its most prized possessions — its liquor license. While the Connecticut Supreme Court ruled Mory's failed to meet the legal definition of a club, it did not resolve the sex discrimination question raised by "Women vs. Connecticut."

U.S. passive to Peru move by Russians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. officials do not appear concerned about the entry into South America of Soviet military technicians for the first time.

Pentagon officials have reported that two or three Russian technicians are in Peru to train Peruvian soldiers in the use of Soviet tanks bought last year.

Peru is the only Western Hemisphere nation, apart from Cuba, equipped with Soviet weapons. "Where weapons purchases are made, techreps (technical representatives) generally aren't far behind," one U.S. source said.

U.S. officials said Soviet efforts at winning friends through weaponry has not always worked well. In Indonesia, which Russia armed, the military toppled the leftist government and installed a strongly anti-Communist one. Egypt expelled all its 15,000 Soviet advisers in 1972.

Famed tavern in setback by court, women

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Mory's Tavern, the storied haunt of Yale men under fire by women's liberationists, lost its liquor license under a Connecticut Supreme Court ruling recently.

The state's highest tribunal held that Mory's, the watering spot for Elis for 110 years and immortalized in the famous "Whiffenpoof Song" of 1909, fails to meet the legal definition of a club.

Under the ruling, Mory's will have to reapply to the state Liquor Control Commission in order to serve alcoholic beverages.

Unresolved by the decision is whether Mory's can retain its traditional restriction against women.

When any new application is considered, however, the question of excluding women is likely to be raised by the commission which has used its licensing powers to attack discrimination.

Mory' was reorganized in 1969, about the time that Yale was opening its doors to women, and for the first time formally excluded women from membership.

The doctor comments

Subaortic stenosis is a birth defect

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB My 16-year-old daughter died of subaortic stenosis. We are trying to find out more about this rare heart disease. Is it always fatal? Can a person with this disease live a normal life? Is it hereditary? What, if anything, can be done for this condition? I will appreciate any information you can give.

DEAR READER It is such a great loss to lose a loved one so early. Fortunately many people with this problem can be helped or even cured. it depends a lot on how severe the problem is, and if there are other problems as well.

Subaortic stenosis really refers to an obstruction at the outlet of the heart, inside the heart chamber. If they obstruction is minmal it may not even be noticed by the individual, and he may lead a fairly normal life, never the wiser. If the obstruction is severe it limits the heart's ability to pump blood out into the arteries, then the situation is quite different.

When the obstruction causes serious problems, then a heart operation can be performed. The heart has to be opened and the obstruction removed. This is usually a very successful operation, if there are no other problems present. It is one of the real advances in heart surgery that has been developed over the past 20 years.

Although it is a birth defect, it is not necessarily an inherited condition. It represents something going wrong during the normal development before birth. Incidentally, an obstruction of the aortic valve itself can occur in older periods as the valve is calcified after rheumatic heart disease, but this is a different type of problem.

DEAR DR. LAMB —I am 76 years old and have heart disease and angina heart pain. I take medicine for this.

On my recent exam my cholesterol was normal at 255, but the triglycerides were slightly elevated to 212. I understand the upper limit of normal for these is 150.

How could the cholesterol be normal and the triglycerides be slightly elevated?

DEAR READER First learn to think of cholesterol as a waxy substance which is not a fat, and triglycerides as fat. The fat particles, triglycerides, are attached to some cholesterol in the blood. The ratio of the two often varies. It is not uncommon to have high blood fats and normal cholesterol levels.

For more information on cholesterol write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1550 Radio City Station, N.Y., New York 10019, and ask for the "Cholesterol" booklet. Enclose 50 cents to cover costs.

Incidentally, not everyone would agree that your cholesterol level was normal. I would regard it as borderline. Studies show that the lowest rate of heart attacks occur in persons with levels below 220. The 250 range is sometimes used only because it is an average figure for our population, a population with a high incidence of heart attacks. So, I would prefer to see both of your values at a lower level.

Dr. Lamb welcomes your letters, but because of the large volume of mail, he can answer individually only letters used in his column. Write to Dr. Lamb in care of The Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Federal judge overrules Simon's order

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A federal judge has overruled Energy Chief William Simon's order which prohibited gasoline dealers from favoring their regular customers.

U. S. District Court Judge William C. Frey signed a temporary restraining order against Simon lifting the ban on gasoline priority for regular customers at a service station here.

Station owner Gordon Reeves filed a federal court suit Friday contending that his business would be ruined by Simon's Feb. 13 order.

Frey, who issued the restraining order for 10 days, also ordered a hearing in the case to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be issued during litigation. The hearing was scheduled for March 1.

Reeves testified during a hearing in the case Tuesday that for two weeks before the FEO order in question was handed down, he had been dispensing half of his daily fuel allocation to his regular customers and the remainder to the general public. He said that 65 to 70 per cent of his business has come from regular customers for over 17 years.

Search for energy to mean assault on land and water

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The intensified search for energy has men scrambling to the mountains and sailing into the tidewaters. It remains to be seen how well the land and water around us survive the new assault.

Legal environmental barriers erected during the last few years should forestall the kind of rape in the name of energy that might have occurred given the same crisis at an earlier time in the nation's history.

But already things are happening that either would have not, or would have been delayed, had energy consciousness not crashed down as it did in this the winter of our discomfort.

Offshore oil and gas development, a dirty word at the time of the Santa Barbara spills, is on the upswing; strip mining, discredited in some parts of the East, may go west where it is relatively unknown; some public lands in the Rockies are being leased for experimental oil shale projects, with as yet unknown consequences for water and wildlife around them; offshore ports are being boosted, with possible risks from miles of ocean pipeline; the Alaska pipeline was pushed through, perhaps years sooner than it would have been, by a Congress concerned about energy.

Question mark

The extent of oil leasing on the outer continental shelf is still a question mark. Whether it should be allowed on the Atlantic Coast and in the Gulf of Alaska is the subject of a year-long study by the Council on Environmental Quality, a cabinet level environmental advisory agency. It hopes to reach a decision by mid-April.

In the meantime the White House has ordered the Interior Department to more than triple the offshore acreage elsewhere that will be leased for oil and gas development and exploration. The area involved is now 10 million acres, to be leased during 1975.

Less land—30,000 acres—is involved in the oil shale project; but the complexities of that undertaking are a good example of the debate being stirred up.

The government believes there are 600 billion barrels of oil locked in the rocks of the West, but no one knows how much of it can be recovered. Getting it out requires mining— either strip mining or conventional deep mining—or digging a hole and heating up the shale underground to separate out the oil. If mined the rock must be crushed and then heated, and the used shale—bigger in volume than when it was extracted—must be disposed of.

Unpleasant prospect

The prospect of canyons filled with spent shale or acres carved up by strip mining is not a pleasant for environmentalists. The Interior Department says companies seeking to try their skills at getting the oil will have to present "carefully developed plans" on what they will do with the used shale.

Six tracts of land, each a little over 5,000 acres, are involved. Bids have already been received on two in Colorado, both of which are expected to be strip mine operations. The other tracts, in Wyoming and Utah, will be leased later this year and the Interior Department believes at least two of them will employ underground heating systems so the surface will not be disturbed.

Most of the processes require large amounts of water, frequently in scarce supply in some parts of the West. The limited supplies of water in the region prompted Joe Browder of the Environmental Policy Center in Washington to observe: "Anyone who thinks you can have both oil shale production and agriculture (water) use in the Colorado Basin is crazy."

Critical study

One of the most critical studies of the pilot oil shale project was made by the The Institute of Ecology's Environmental Impact Assessment Project which published a 200-page report reviewing Interior's findings on the probable impact of the project. The study said no attention was given to the possibility that salt might be leached from spent shale and contaminate the Colorado River; big game might be driven out by the influx of people and noise and the loss of streams in canyon bottoms; that there was no reason to believe ways could be developed during the 20-year lease period to get vegetation growing on top of the piles of spent shale.

But here, as with many of the other projects, both the dividends and the damages are still down the road. The shale projects—which will not produce their first barrel of oil until 1979—are designed to find out if it can be done. At the same time they will be demonstrating what happens to the countryside if it is done.

China's upheaval has westerners perplexed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Analysts perched on the rim of the People's Republic of China, as well as the handful of American diplomats in that country, have been watching with considerable concern the massive campaign of ideological purification underway there for some weeks.

They naturally wonder if the nationwide campaign to root out any antirevolutionary tendencies is the beginning of another Cultural Revolution. That was the name given the violent period from 1966 to 1969, when the Red Guards were turned loose to purify the Communist party and restore the revolutionary zeal of those tending to drift toward "revisionism" or even capitalism.

American observers and officials are keenly interested in trying to judge the ultimate effect of the current ideological campaign—which is increasing in rhetorical intensity but has not yet led to violence—on relations between the United States and China.

It has been just two years since President Nixon scored the diplomatic breakthrough which has led step-by-step to the point where each country has the equivalent of an embassy in the capital of the other, although they call them "liaison offices."

The Cultural Revolution was undertaken because Mao Tsetung became convinced the once revolutionary communist apparatus in China had degenerated into just another massive bureaucracy of timeservers who did not recognize the necessity for eternal vigilance against resurgent reactionaries.

The situation at present does not appear, to most American analysts, as bad from the point of view of Peking as it was in 1966. For that reason, they believe Mao, who again has been declared to be backing the revolutionary movement in China, will not find it necessary to resort to such drastic measures.

Some western authorities contend the present campaign is directed against Premier Chou En-lai, the agile and durable veteran of the revolution against Nationalist China. They seem to think some of the younger radical elements have persuaded Mao that Chou is guilty of "elitism," the Confucian doctrine that "only the highest are wise and the lowest are all stupid."

However, a majority of experts on China appear to doubt this. They point out that after the Communist Party Congress in August, Chou emerged stronger than ever. Many of these western experts believe the present ideological campaign may well have been started by Chou and his middle of the road supporters against the radical left, which distrusts the tendency of China to improve relations with the West.

It is obvious American experts really have no firm idea as to what is behind the latest campaign and whether it will lead to violence or achieve its aim of "purification" short of bloodshed.

One thing is clear, however, and that is that China continues to regard the Soviet Union, with whom it has a 4,500 mile common border, as an implacable "revisionist" enemy. This was one of the big factors leading to rapprochement with the United States.

For that reason, the assumption here is that Peking, having achieved a rather strong relationship with Washington to counterbalance the Soviet threat, is not going to take a strong antiforeign stance, although it may not be quite so anxious for exchanging cultural representatives.

Six tons of fish, game given away

REDDING (UPI) — More than six tons of poached game, illegally taken fish and road kill animals were donated to 50 recipients, ranging from Boy Scouts to county jails, in Northern California last year, according to Department of Fish and Game.

The department's regional office here Tuesday said the meat included that of 200 deer, four elk, 48 salmon, 286 trout, 18 pheasant, four ducks, seven doves, 30 abalone, 31 clams and 47 pounds of mussels.

The department said the animals and fish were forfeited by court order under Fish and Game Code violations or were the result of highway vehicle kills or kills authorized because of crop or property damage.

LIFT OFF — Jerry Irvine, launcher for the Claremont Rocket Society, sends a club rocket aloft for teachers and students at Vista School in Claremont. Clay Smith, rocket club advisor with speaker to mouth, explained to the students the workings of the rockets and the club's weekend rocket launchings in the desert. Smith also showed the students films taken by cameras installed in the rockets, which are recovered and used many times in competitions by the club.

Rocket launchers demonstrate skills

CLAREMONT — Vista del Valle Elementary School's 350 students and teachers lined up obediently behind brightly colored safety cones and cheered lustily as members of the Claremont Rocket Club treated them to the launching of eight 'sky travelers.'

Eyes were turned skyward as the onlookers tried to follow the ascent and descent of the varied lengths of rockets and club members sprinted toward the expected recovery area of each rocket to save the projectiles from any damage.

Rocket club adviser Clay Smith, a senior at Upland High, explained to students during the screening of a club movie inside a clasroom that the club always follows strict safety rules.

After the film, Smith answered a volley of questions from the inspired students about making rockets, how to join the club, and other pointers.

Smith said it costs $4 a year to join the club, to go on field trips and to use the club's launching facilities.

He explained that rockets are launched with a self-contained propellant engine costing 20 to 65 cents depending on size of the propelant.

He told how the rockets are brought back to earth with a shroud, and explained that a shroud is a piece of material, whereas a parachute is made of several pieces of material sewn together.

Smith brought smiles to [illegible] announced that club membership is open to those 9 and older and with a parent permission slip.

He explained how rockets are used over and over gain, and that the club is composed of various classes of memberships from the youngster who is new to rockets to the veteran who may wish to launch a multi-stage rocket.

The students marveled at the films taken of the earth by cameras attacked to the rockets.

Smith further explained how a car battery is used to ignite two small wires, similar to wiring found in the household toaster, which set the propellant ablaze.

The students were let down temporarily when a multi-stage rocket failed to ignite, but Smith announced after the malfunction that the launch would go off after all, and the youngsters applauded.

After the launchings, the pupils felt the whole thing had been a blast.

WHERE DID IT GO? — Vista School students in Claremont were treated to a rocket launching by members of the Claremont Rocket Society recently, and each time a rocket was sent aloft, the youngsters attempted to keep track of the missile. They were not always successful as a couple went out of view, then when the rocket's propellant had burned out and the rocket began its returned to, earth, the youngsters cheered and wanted to help recover the craft.

Cyclamates may be on way back

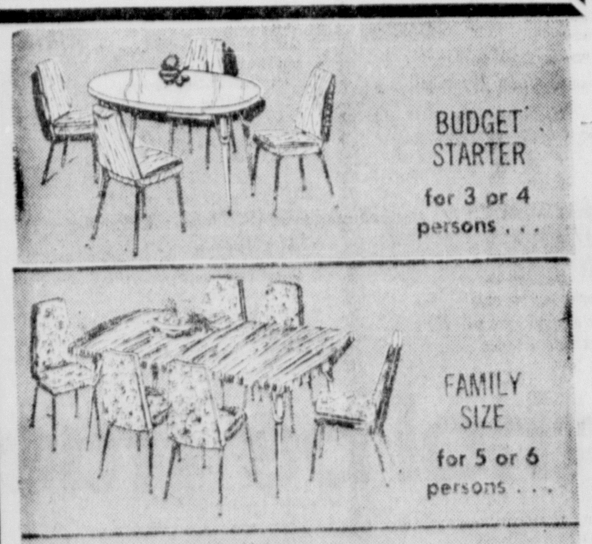

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cyclamates — once considered the scourge of soft drinks — may be on the way back.

The Food and Drug Administration FDA recently was positioned to have cyclamate reinstated as a food additive. Cyclamate is an artificial sweetener that was used in various foods before being banned in 1969. The ban stemmed from a two-year rat study. Rats in the study ate cyclamates in various doses and later developed bladder tumors.

Subsequent studies in Germany, England, the Netherlands and Japan have failed to duplicate the results of the rat study. That's one reason for the petition by Abbott Laboratories of Chicago asking the FDA to okay cyclamates. Rats in the study who got bladder tumors were fed cyclamates over 240 times the level a human might consume.

Violence also rising in city, county jails

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The increasing turmoil that is besetting California prisons is also apparent on a smaller scale in the state's city and county jails, the state Board of Corrections said today.

In a 69-page report to the legislature on local detention facilities, the board expressed concern "with the increasing incidence of violence in jails and prisoner disturbances."

A major factor in the trend is greater use of programs to "divert" less serious offenders out of jail, leaving behind "persons who are charged with violent crimes and are therefore more prone to act out," said the board.

"On a smaller scale, jails are experiencing the turmoil apparent in the state's prisons and for some of the same reasons— a relative increase in the proportion of violent offenders to nonviolent offenders," the report continued.

A final draft of the report was approved by the board on a voice vote. It was based on inspections of city and county jails in 18 counties, representing roughly one-fifth of the state's local detention facilities.

The board said its inspections showed "there is a great deal of activity at upgrading" jails, but estimated it would cost $27.2 million to bring facilities in the survey counties up to par with voluntary state standards.

Some jails, such as the Greystone in Alameda County, were found to be outmoded and in need of replacement while others required only minor additions or remodeling.

The report added that a prisoner in a county jail is usually safer, is given better food and is under closer guard than an inmate at a city jail.

No figures were included in the report on the frequency or extent of violence in local jails.

Another problem area pointed out by the report was a widespread lack of attention given facilities for jailing women especially in smaller counties. The board suggested the solution may be formation of regional facilities for women prisoners.

Strand of wire may keep cat off fence

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: The next-door-neighbor's cat, Bongo, has almost been wiped out several times by Semi, our hound. They had to keep Bango in to keep him from being killed. In order to keep peace, we fenced in our big backyard. So what does their ornery cat do? Bongo sits on top of the fence taunting Semi and driving him stark raving crazy. I can get Bongo off that fence if I'm close enough but how can I keep him off, even when I'm not there? — C. L.

Dear C. L.: A strand or two of stiff, smooth wire run a couple of inches above the top of the fence would help deny Bongo a comfortable perch there and, if porperly placed, should be enough to dissuade him from parking up there at all. (Repellants of various types may be tried but they're not a last solution.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: I am writing to you in hopes you can help me with my puppy and mother problem. When I am gone during the day, like at school, my mother saves up a list of all the bad things the puppy has done for the day and presents it to me at the door when I get home. She expects me to punish Schatzie for everything on the list so this will make a good dog out of her, she thinks Schatzie loves me, I know, and wants to be with me but now she is afraid to come to me when I first come in and, of course, it is because I have to spank her. I hate to do it and I don't think it is helping her at all. Please answer quickly, if you can. — L. T.

DEAR L. T.: Schatzie can only be further confused and bewildered by such treatment. If she is not neurotic now, she is headed in that direction. Unless punishment is administered consistently and ONLY at the time of the misbehavior, the pup cannot connect the misdeeds and the punishment which is the only circumstance under which negative conditioning punishment can be effective. Actually, puppies do NOT need to feel pain to learn. Postive conditioning produces more positive results including a more healthy and stable adult dog behavior. If at times accentuating the positive and eliminating the negative in puppy training seems to require more patience, remember the benefits of the reward system make it the right approach in the long run.

Mosley looks for 'edge'

By CURT WEBSTER
P-B Correspondent

ONTARIO — Anybody who doesn't like Mike Mosley is (a) socially maladjusted or (b) trying to catch him in a race car.

Mosley, a 29-year old veteran of USAC Championship car driving and assorted Sprint car and Midget campaigns, has yet to win a National driving title but projects one of the more likable personalities in motor racing.

Perched on a Sting Ray bicycle in the Ontario Motor Speedway pit area early this week, awaiting a chance for a practice run for the California 500, Mike might have been the kid down the street who delivers your paper—If the kid down the street wears an asbestos fire suit and a walrus moustache.

Uppermost on the minds of the contingency of drivers and mechancis who have descended upon OMS to prepare for the upcoming 500 is the new USAC fuel restrictions limiting each car to a mere 280 gallons of exotic racing mixture on race day. And that's exactly what Mike Mosley wanted to talk about.

"Everybody is going to have their slide rules out trying to get the right combination," Mosely predicted. "280 gallons means that we have to get 1.8 miles to the gallon in order to finish the race."

That kind of mileage may not sound like an unreasonable demand to make on any engine, but the super high performance Offenhausers which are the mainstay of Champ car powerplants usually run at somewhere in the vicinity of 1.4 miles per gallon.

The problem that is hitting mechanics in the face is to increase mileage without reducing the horsepower of the engine into non-competitiveness.

"It might be in the boost; it might be in the turbo," Mosley continued.

"We were out here earlier testing and," he adds with a chipmunk grin, "that might give us a little bit of an edge."

Whether Mosley's "edge" results in victory this time around or he has to wait just a little longer, it's pretty well a foregone conclusion that he is going to break loose and win a California 500 one of these years.

He finished fifth in the '72 Ontario classic and counted himself lucky, but last September he roared home in third place. If the trend continues he shouldn't have to wait past March 10 for his first 500-mile victory.

Mike's inability to break into Victory Circle at any of the three USAC 500's (Ontario, Indy, and Pocono) has kept race fans from mentioning his name in the same breath with A. J. Foyt or the Unser brothers, but a glance at his record the past few seasons shows, surprisingly, that Mosley's Number 98 Lodestar Eagle has been as competitive as any machine on the circuit.

In '71 and '72 Mosley has posted a victory in the Trenton 200, finished second and third in Phoenix 150's, and fifth at the Trenton 300 in addition to his success at OMS.

All this despite painful injuries received at Indianapolis in fiery '71 and '72 crashes. Both times he smacked the Turn Four wall repeatedly.

Last year, Mosley's high finish in the point standings were owed to a season which saw him finally negotiate Indy successfully (tenth), charge to a fourth at Pocono, and wind up in second at Michigan's Tony Bettenhausen 200.

The pleasantly talkative Mosley might go on all afternoon about any number of racing subjects. (The starting procedure at Indy is a particular sore point. "You can't see the starter, like you can here. Somebody down in the corner decides it's time to race, and the only way you know the race has started is the guys in front take off. If the guy in front of you accelerates, then you accelerate.")

But Mosley has a race to practice for and eventually peddles off on his five mile per hour bike to fire up his 200 miles per hour Eagle, grinning all the way.

You've just got to like him.

A. J. Foyt pushed his Foyt-powered Gilmore Coyote past Offenhauser-powered cars Wednesday in the second day of practice runs.

Foyt recorded a 187.134 miles per hour speed, the day's fastest, as 13 of the 36 drivers exceeded 180 miles per hour.

The next four fastest times were all recorded by Offys, including Gary Bettenhausen at 185.900, Bobby Unser at 185.311, Billy Vukovich at 185.311, and Wally Dallenbach, last year's California 500 champion, at 184.804.

Steve Durst of Medford Lakes, N.J. was turned down as a rookie driver by chief steward Dick King. Durst had planned to drive the ThermoKing Special.

Women's sports concerns schools

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Elroy Hirsch, athletic director at the University of Wisconsin, said Wednesday he was concerned about federal guidelines that might result in men and women playing next to each other — perhaps on football teams.

Hirsch was commenting about excerpts of guidelines the NCAA sent him Monday. He said the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare drafted the guidelines on the participation of women in college sports.

Hirsch said, however, he and, apparently, other athletic directors are concerned mostly about the guidelines' financial implications, because he said it seems the guidelines must take effect immediately.

Hirsch added, however, the guidelines were only in a rough draft, and would probably be rewritten following hearings in Washington. He also said he read the excerpts briefly.

"Apparently you must have comparable programs," Hirsch said. "Now they don't specifically say football."

Hirsch said there was some confusion about whether men and women would be on the same team.

"If you have two programs and not enough women come out to make up a women's team, the men's team must be open for women competitors," he said.

"But then, if the comparative skills are not enough for the women to make the men's team, or if there is for example a basketball team with 17 men and one woman, then that's inequality, and you must go back and have the women's team anyway," said Hirsch, adding it was confusing.

"It isn't final," Hirsch said. "And I say there's going to be I suppose a lot of pro and con on this.

"I understand from other directors there are going to be hearings in Washington, but it's just a concern that we all have that, if we all have to abide by what these guidelines say right now, it would call for some drastic changes," he said.

"You know, we've got to ask where is all this financing going to come from," he said. "He said it would mean the cost of "equal coaching, travel, equipment, schedule, scholarships, everything else."

Hirsch said specifically what sports are involved appeared up to the women.

"Every campus is different as to what the women are asking for," he said. He said women at Wisconsin so far had not requested participation in football, just basketball, track, swimming, track, golf, tennis, field hockey and several other sports.

Notre Dame top selection in tournament

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Second-ranked Notre Dame, seventh-ranked Marquette, 16th-ranked Creighton and Oral Roberts completed the nine at-large selections to the NCAA basketball tournament today.

Notre Dame (23-1) and Marquette (22-3) will meet the champions of the Ohio Valley and Mid-American conferences in the Mideast regional first round March 9 at Indiana State. The official pairings will be made later today.

In addition, Oral Roberts (20-4) and No. 16 Creighton (21-5) were named to the Midwest regional field.

Earlier, five Eastern teams were named to the 25-team field.

Pittsburgh (22-3), Providence (23-3) and South Carolina (20-4) were the three at-large teams named to the East regional.

Syracuse (18-6) was moved to the Midwest regional and Dayton (17-7) will go to the West regional.

The other 16 teams in the field will be conference champions.

First round games will be played March 9 with the winners advancing to the four regional tournaments March 14 and 16. The four surviving teams will go to the NCAA finals March 23 and 25 at Greensboro, N.C.

Bruins vote to end interviews

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — UCLA's Athletic News Bureau has been told not to set up any more interviews of members of the Bruins' basketball team this season, manager Vic Kelley has disclosed.

"If the news media wants to come out to the campus and get their own interviews, that's fine," Kelley said. "But we have been told not to arrange any more for the rest of the year.

"The players are just too busy with their studies."

Kelley said the players made the request themselves to their coach, John Wooden, after a vote last week following a double loss to Oregon State and Oregon on the road.

UCLA to host national finals

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The National A-AU track and field championships will be held Friday and Saturday, June 21-22, at UCLA's Drake Stadium, it has been announced by Glenn Davis, director of special events for the Los Angeles Times. The meet will be sponsored by the Times. "We are delighted to be able to stage the national championships on such a fine facility," Davis said.

Kings can gain ground against Atlanta tonight

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Los Angeles Kings, three points out of fourth place in the NHL West, have a chance to pick up ground tonight when they meet the Atlanta Flames.

The Kings, following a 4-1 defeat by the Pittsburgh Penguins Wednesday night, are 21-29-10 for 52 points, while Atlanta is 22-28-11 for 55 points.

Los Angeles was ahead 1-0 in the second period Wednesday when the Penguins exploded for four goals in a seven-minute span off Kings' goalie Rogie Vachon, who posted shutouts in his last two starts against Pittsburgh.

Lowell McDonald made it 1-1 at :10 of the period, followed by scores by rookie Bob McManama and veterans John Pronovost and Ron Shock.

Butch Goring got the Kings' goal at 4:25 of the first period, taking a pass from Dan Maloney.

The Kings, now 0-1-2 on their roadtrip, return home Saturday night to meet the St. Louis Blues. Following their meeting with the Flames, the Kings play 13 of their final 16 games at the Forum.

Win fifth in row

Lakers making their move

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — It has been a difficult year for Bill Sharman and his Los Angeles Lakers, but things may finally be looking up.

"I'm very proud of these guys," Sharman beamed after the Lakers edged the powerful Milwaukee Bucks 110-108 in Milwaukee Wednesday night for their fifth straight win. Los Angeles is now only one game behind division-leading Golden State in the Pacific Division race.

"You know, it's hard to get used to playing wihout Wilt Chamberlain and Jerry West, and we've been losing some pretty close games," Sharman said.

"But now everyone's working hard and we're hoping we can keep winning the close ones. Milwaukee may be the best team in the NBA right now, and beating them in Milwaukee has to give us a lot of confidence."

The Lakers were trailing by nine points with five minutes to play, but went ahead 106-105 with 1:19 left when Connie Hawkins one-handed a lay-up on a fast break.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was then fouled by pesky Bill Bridges and tied it up on a free throw. Bridges came back down the court and hit a jumper from the top of the key to give the Lakers a 108-106 advantage with 50 seconds left.

With 28 seconds left, Lucius Allen missed a jumper, Bridges rebounded and the Lakers held the ball until the 24-second clock expired. Goodrich threw up a 35-foot jumper as the timer went off, giving the Lakers a 110-106 lead. A final bucket by Jon McGlocklin made the victory margin two points.

Happy Hairston, whom Sharman called "the best rebounding forward in the league," led the Lakers with 22 points and 26 rebounds, while Goodrich had 20 points. Abdul-Jabbar scored 33 for the Bucks.

The Lakers, who host Kansas City-Omaha at the Forum here Friday night, will hope for the best when Golden State hosts Portland tonight. The Lakers must win the division in order to make the playoffs for their 14th consecutive season.

Angels will work harder claims Bobby Winkles

HOLTVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — Manager Bobby Winkles told his California Angels players to expect to work longer hours every day in the 1974 season than they did last year.

To make sure things got started off right, the Angels spent nearly five hours on fundamentals Wednesday, mostly covering the basepaths.

It was one of the longest opening preseason day drills in the club's history.

"We're going to work on defense as much as possible," the tobacco chewing Winkles, a clipboard in his hand, told his players. "You're going to have it pounded into your heads all spring."

The Angels' entire spring roster of players have all been signed to contracts.

The team announced Wednesday that first baseman Mike Epstein and infielder Winston Llenas, the last holdouts, had agreed to terms.

With 40 players in camp, only five team members were absent—outfielder Frank Robinson, second baseman Sandy Alomar, infielder Tom McCraw, outfielder Mickey Rivers and pitcher Bary Raziano.

Raziano was only recently acquired from Kansas City in a trade for Vada Pirson and Robinson has permission not to join the club until March 9 when the Angels switch training to Palm Springs.

A former college baseball coach at Arizona State before joining the Angels, Winkles laid down the law to his players about using bad language "especially if there are ladies around" and getting haircuts.

"I got 700 to 800 letters from fans last year," he said, "and they complimented us that our players looked like men instead of half and half."

Sideburns could extend no lower than the ear lobe and hair must be kept off the back of the collar, Winkles said.

Dodgers have high hopes about pennant chances

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers, who won 95 games but finished second to Cincinnati in the National League West last season, held their opening spring drill Wednesday amid high hopes for the 1974 campaign.

"I'm much more enthusiastic about our chances this year than I was last season," said manager Walt Alston. "Last year we had an infield full of question marks and still won 95 games. I think we can win a few more than that this time."

The team went through a three-hour workout in unusually chilly Florida weather. Three Dodger players are still unsigned—catcher Joe Ferguson and pitchers Don Sutton and Al Downing. Sutton, who is reportedly asking $115,000, was scheduled to meet with Dodger officials today.

Alston said he planned to hold "one-on-one" meetings with every player during spring training.

"It may take five minutes or it may take 55," he said. "I want to know what each player's thoughts are on spring training, what he'd like to see more or less of. I also want him to grade himself on his strength and weaknesses. I want to know how his appraisal compares with my own."

Dodger pitcher Andy Messersmith expressed disgust at the decision by the Atlanta Braves to hold Henry Aaron out of their season-opening series in Cincinnati.

"The Reds are the one club you have to beat," Messermsith said. "It's a farce. They're turning baseball into a stage show and saving the main act for Atlanta."

Enberg elected best in state

LOS ANGELES — Dick Enberg, voice of the California Angels and Los Angeles Rams on radio station KMPC, has been elected California Sportscaster of the Year in a statewide poll conducted by the National Sportscasters and Sportswriters Awards.

It is the fourth year that Enberg has been selected over all other radio and television sportscasters in the state.

Enberg's award will be presented at ceremonies in Salisbury, N. C., on March 26 and 27.

Valley cagers lose coin flips

Pomona Valley high school basketball teams hope they fare better on the courts Friday night then they did in coin flips Wednesday.

All three of the valley's remaining CIF playoff contenders — Ganesha, Walnut and Western Christian — lost coin flips in determining sites for Friday night's second round action.

As a result, Ganesha's San Antonio League champions must play Tustin at the Foothill High gymasium in Tustin in 3-A action. Walnut will travel to San Clemente for its 2-A battle while Western Christian visits Pasadena Poly in a 1-A contest.

Poly recruits JC gridders

POMONA — Four more junior college gridders including one from Mt. San Antonio College will be playing for Cal Poly Pomona next fall.

Richard Gomez, a 215-pound linebacker who gained all-conference honors while playing with the Mounties, has signed his letter of intent to play for Cal Poly. He played at La Puente High previously.

Harold Eggers and George Emigh, both of whom were all-conference defensive players at Cypress College, also have signed letters of intent to join the Broncos. Eggers was Orange County JC player of the year.

The fourth player is Randy Taylor of Palomar, an offensive guard who played at Vista High. This brings to 24 the total number of junior college gridders who have been recruited recently by new Coach Andy Vinci and his Cal Poly staff.

Valley wrestlers go to state finals

By JIM McCONNELL
P-B Staff Writer

Eight Pomona Valley wrestlers will be in action as the CIF state finals will start Friday at Cal State Hayward. The mat tourney will continue through Saturday, with the championship bouts to be held starting at 7:30 p.m. Saturday night.

Upland High's Jack Glasheen heads the list of local grapplers. Glasheen won the 115-pound title at the CIF sectionals at Marina High last week, and is expected to place high in the state meet.

Other 115's from the area are Garey's Sergio Godoy and Ontario's Roger DeSantiago. Godoy finished third in his class at Marina and DeSantiago finished fifth.

Moving up the ladder by weight, Terry Kamp nailed down a fifth in the 123's to advance to state along with fellow Saint Karl Stupke, who finished fifth in the 178-pound class at Marina. San Dimas has the honor of being the only local high school with more than one grappler at the state tourney.

Andy MacKnight of Chaffey High pulled down a third-place trophy at the sectionals and should do well in state for the Tigers. Mike Snipes of Nogales also came away with a third place award in the 148-pound division and should be competitive at the state level.

Rounding out the picture, Montclair High will be represented by senior heavyweight John Surby. Surby will be out to avenge his only loss of the year, to Sonora's Preston Stanley, in the finals at Marina. Both Surby and Stanley should do weill at Hayward.

By winning the CIF championship at Marina, Glasheen became only the second San Antonio League wrestler to pull down th Southern Section crown. Ganesha's Steve Pivac won the 98-pound title in 1971. If Glasheen can win at the state level, it would be a first for a Pomona Valley grappler.

Of course, competition will be super keen for all the locals, as every high school in California will be represented at the Hayward tourney. If all eight representatives can place as they did at Marina last week it would be a major achievement and a real boost to local wrestling interest.

Action in the two-day tourney will begin at 9 a.m. Friday with the weigh-ins. Wrestping will begin at 12 noon Friday, with the winners and consolationists having to go to the mat at least five times to take home a trophy.

Six MSAC wrestlers in state meet

SACRAMENTO — Six Mt. San Antonio College wrestlers, including South Central Regional champions Steve Pivac (118) and Terry Martin (134) arrive today at American River College here to compete in the state community college wrestling championships. The meet runs through Saturday.

Besides Pivac and Martin, the Mountie contingent includes Richard Headon (158), Andy Guzman (142), Al Gardea (150) and Richard Herrera (177). Gardea and Herrera are alternates in their weight classes.

Pivac and Martin claimed weight titles in the South Central Regional championships last weekend at Ventura College. Pivac was named the outstanding wrestler of the tournament, and coach Fred Burri was chosen South Central Region coach of the year by his peers.

Headon was a runnerup in the 158-pound class in the tourney, while Guzman was third in the 142-pound class.

Gardea and Herrera were fifth in their respective weight classes, earning the right to go to the state meet as alternates.

Poly, UCR battle in CCAA baseball

By JIM McCONNELL
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — California Collegiate Athletic Association baseball action starts Friday for the Cal Poly Broncos, and coach John Scolinos is concerned about his squad's chances.

Not only is the CCAA as tough if not tougher than ever in the diamond sport, but the Broncos will carry a three-game losing steak into Friday's 2:30 p.m. battle at UC Riverside.

The two teams will then play a doubleheader at Cal Poly on Saturday beginning at noon.

It ought to be a good test for both squads. Neither UCR or Poly is regarded as favorites in the CCAA — that nod would have to go to Cal Poly San Luis Obispo off early-season performances — so both schools would like to start on the winning track in a hurry.

Poly is coming off three straight losses at University of Arizona as the Broncos now sport a 4-6 non-league mark. UCR carries a 2-5 mark into their game today with Redlands.

Top hitters for the Broncos have been Dick Parkhouse, sporting a fine .462 average, Dave Metkovich at .375, and Pete Alexander at .364. Dennis Rogers and Steve Herter have been supplying most of the run-producing power for Poly. Sophomore John Henderson, a 6-foot-6 first baseman, has been the big bomber for UCR.

Slated for mound duty on Friday for the Broncos is Vic Bernal. Bernal will take a 0-3 mark into the contest. In Saturday's twinbill, Dee King (2-1) and Mike Heinen (0-1) are scheduled to pitch for Scolinos' crew.

Cary Smith, Mack Fisher, and ex-Chaffey College hurler Ron Gill are the top choices for mound duty for UCR.

Sports news in brief

THE HONOULU franchise of the New World Football League has signed tight end Frank Johnson and running back Derrick Williams of UC Riverside. Both were drafted by the Rams also. Johnson was UCR's most valuable player last season and Williams gained 1,071 yards in 124 carries. Both were all-California Collegiate Athletic Association choices last fall.

THE LOS ANGELES AZTECS of the North American Soccer League have signed Brazilian Iris De Brito, a former teammate of soccer great Pele, DeBrito, 28, played on the forward line with Pele for the Santos team. The Aztecs open their pre-season April 7 against a Monterrey, Mexico team.

EIGHTEEN - YEAR - OLD Marita Redondo has agreed to play tennis for the Los Angeles Strings of the New World Team Tennis League. Miss Redondo, of National City, won the Southern California Sectionals women's title in 1972 and the Pacitic Southwest Tournament women's division the same year. Miss Redondo was originally drafted by the WTT Toronto franchise, but came to the Los Angeles team in a trade.

GAIL MARQUIS' layup with 26 seconds left Wednesday carried Queen's College to a 57-56 women's basketball victory over Immaculata College and snapped the Pennsylvania School's 35-game streak. Miss Marquis scored 15 points and collected 12 rebounds as Queens lifted its record to 16-2. Immaculata, now 11-1, started its long winning skein during the 1972 Women's National Tournament.

GEORGE MANS, assistant football coach at the University of Michigan, was named head coach at Eastern Michigan University Wednesday. Mans, 34, succeeds Dan Boisture, who ealier this month signed to coach the Detroit Wheels of the World Football League.

TOP-SEEDED John Newcombe defeated fellow Austrlian Roy Emerson, 6-1, 6-2, Wednesday to advancé to quarterfinal play in the $50,000 Michelob pro-celebrity tennis classic. Newcombe will meet Brian Gottfired of Baltimore, who defeated Clark Graebner of New York, 3-6, 7-6, 6-3.

UNDEFEATED SUGAR Ray Seales, 151, Tacoma, Wash. scored his 16th straight pro victory Wednesday night by stopping game Omar Chavez, 159, Los Angeles, at 2:44 of the eighth round of a scheduled 10 rounder. The lefthanded Seales, 1972 Olympic champion in the 139 pound class, had Chavez down twice in earlier rounds before finishing him off with a flurry of combinations.

DEFENSEMAN LARRY Mavety of the Chicago Cougars won an appeal of his five-game suspension and will be allowed by the World Hockey Association to rejoin his club immediately. Mavety was suspended for having struck referee Bob Kolari with his stick in a game at Winnipeg the previous night.

Foreman elated at turn of events

PLEASANTON, Calif. (UPI) — Heavyweight champion George Foreman expressed relief Wednesday after learning he wouldn't have to return to Houston for the property settlement aspect of his divorce hearing.

"It makes me feel good to know that I can stay here in camp and take care of my business with Ken Norton without any more interruptions," said the champion.

Foreman, who fights Norton in Caracas on March 26, plans to continue training at the Alameda County Fairgrounds until "about 15 days before the fight. I'd like to acclimate myself to Caracas for that long."

Foreman's manager, Dick Sadler, reported that "my fighter's weight has been from 215 to 217 pounds for all 39 fights of his career. The way things are going we don't anticipate anything different for the Norton fight."

Earlier in the day, it was announced in Houston Foreman reached agreement with his ex-wife, Adrienne Ray, for a property settlement of $235,000 plus a $400 a month child support.

Reed maintains lead

Only minor changes can occur as the Progress-Bulletin scoring derby for four-year colleges enters its final week.

Nothing can change the top four scorers' positions. Rick Reed, Dennis Vanzant, Geoff Northrop, and Bill Rockwood are sure of their places.

Pomona-Pitzer's Norm Carter has dropped into a tie for fifth with La Verne's Dwight Washington, each with a 12.9 average. Washington and Rockwood have been climbing steadily.

Paul Newton of Cal Poly is averaging 11.5 points per game with 161 points in 14 games. But Newton is short of the two-thirds minimum required to be eligible as yet.

LVC finishes third

Poets whip Leos

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

WHITTIER — Conference champion Whittier College picked a bad night to get its game together.

Bad for La Verne's basketball hopes — that is.

The Poets set the tempo of Wednesday night's season finale from the start. The result was that the Leopards' entire game was thrown off.

After a close first half, Whittier broke the game open and nearly blew the Leos out of the Wardman Gym in doing so. When it was all over, the scoreboard read Whittier 91, La Verne 75.

La Verne's loss, coupled with Redlands' win over Pomona-Pitzer, gave the Bulldogs second place with a 9-3 mark to the Leos' 8-4. Overall La Verne winds up 11-14.

"We let them set the tempo," said coach Art Bias quietly. "We let them get breakaways and our backup men didn't stop them. We just couldn't contain their fast break."

The first 10:08 of the game was a dogfight with the Leos hanging tough and battling the taller, more experienced Poets evenly. Dwight Washington, who wound up as game-high scorer with 23 points, put La Verne ahead 22-21.

After that the Leopards' shooting went completely awry and they managed to stay in the game only because they were able to make free throws when the Poets fouled.

After Jones' bucket, the Leos made only two more field goals in the half, but both by reserve Tom Jones. None of the starters could connect.

Fortunately, Whittier's aggressive play resulted in fouls and the Leos cashed in on free throws, three by Bill Rockwood, two each by Ken Lipkin and Dave Castenada, and one by Washington.

The cold spell was still in effect when play resumed in the second half. Whittier outscored the Leos 10-2 in the first 3:26 of the second half and the game was really over at that point.

In that span, La Verne had committed three turnovers each resulting in a Whittier basket. The Leos took only three shots themselves and made just one.

The bucket was by Washington, who scored 14 of his 23 points in the half. But Dwight also picked up his third and fourth fouls in the first minute and 36 seconds of the half and was not a factor defensively after that.

Coach Dave Jacobs of Whittier said he urged his players during the intermission to change their pattern of play.

"We had a good talk at halftime," he said. "We've been playing pretty sloppy. We shot too soon in the first half and then had to spend too much time playing defense. We're not that good a defensive team. We've got to run and get in closer and then shoot."

Jacobs paid tribute to Bias' coaching.

"I think Art Bias has done a marvelous job spreading that team out and getting them to play as well as they have," he remarked. "You know we've won the championship the last two years and haven't been able to do better than split with them each year."

Jacobs loses four of his five starters, guards Jack Smoot and Al Hardin, forward Berne Hoskin, and center Ron Val Vliet.

Bias doesn't lose anybody.

Stags finish fifth ahead of Pomona

Claremont-Mudd and Pomona-Pitzer finished Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (SCIAC) basketball play Wednesday night.

It was a happy ending for the Stags. Unhappy for the Sagehens.

Claremont Mudd actually trailed lowly Caltech by as many as eight points in the first half, but got rolling in the second to deal the Beavers a 78-40 defeat at Pasadena.

Pomona-Pitzer started out the other way at Redlands. The Sagehens jumped off to an 8-4 lead and then the roof fell in. The Bulldogs led by 22 points, 47-25, at the half and went on to an 85-63 victory.

As a result of the night's activity, Claremont-Mudd won sole possession of fifth place with a 4-8 record in conference play. Pomona-Pitzer finished sixth with a 3-9 mark.

Overall the Stags posted a 6-18 mark while the Sagehens had a 9-14 record.

The Stags caught up with Caltech with five minutes left in the first half, held a 29-27 lead at the half, and then ran away from the Beavers after the intermission.

C-M held Caltech to just 13 points in the second half while scoring 49. Leading scorer Dave Willhite had 10 of his 17 points in the second half.

Pomona-Pitzer got 35 points combined from freshmen Geoff Northrop (19) and Brandon Boyd (16) but hardly any from anyone else.

Guard Norm Carter slumped to seven, one of his lowest output's ever. No one else had any more than four points for the 'Hens.

Pomona boxers get tune up for Golden Glove finals

SAN BERNARDINO — Many of Southern California's top amateur boxers, including nationally ranked Olympic prospects, tune up for the upcoming Golden Gloves championships at Pomona with a 12-fight card at San Bernardino Municipal Auditorium Saturday night.

Heading the list is Tommy Brooks, 19, the No. 1 AAU boxer at 165 pounds and a protege of former world champion Archie Moore. Brooks boxes out of the powerful Pomona stable of Tony Cerda which also includes:

—Albert Sandoval, the 1973 AAU flyweight champion and recent winner of the California-Nevada eliminations.

—Tony Cerda Jr., 16, two-time national Junior Golden Glove champion at 155 pounds.

—Chip Larson, 20, the 1974 California Diamond Belt champ at 132 pounds.

—Bruce Henderson, a powerfully built 139-pounder who specializes in knockouts and is rated a top pro prospect by boxing observers.

Those four will be on the card Saturday. Sandoval, who already has Golden Glove titles from Oregon and Idaho under his belt this year, will fight Juan Dominguez of East Los Angeles.

Fighting out of the Teamsters Gym in Los Angeles will be Vinnie Reed, a 113-pounder, who will try to avenge a televised loss to Art O'Campo when he faces the latter Saturday night. Johnny Jensen, 19, the 1973 Golden Gloves district champion, also represents the Teamsters Gym. Jensen lost a split decision last December to Mike Hess of Portland, Ore., voted the top boxer at 119 pounds in 1973.

Boxers from Riverside and Perris will also be on the card. Elmer Lasley, long-time boxing handler in Perris, brings heavyweight Henry Washington (205) and 136-pounder Paul Aguirre to the auditorium. Aguirre won his first AAU Golden Glove title in Anaheim two weeks ago.

Handler Lloyd Mackey of Riverside will bring the Yniguez brothers, Martin and Sammy. Sammy, unbeaten in AAU bouts at 125 pounds, is rated a top prospect, while Martin, at 147, is coming off a victory Feb. 16 and a good showing here would propel him into the Pomona tournament.

Yniguez' uncle, Basilio, fought at Perris Hill Park in San Bernardino in 1958 and was regarded as a top prospect. A few days after the bout he was killed in an industrial accident. The brothers' father, Sal Yniguez of Colton, also boxed.

The main card begins at 8 p.m. at the 6th and E Street autidorium but a special pre-fight exhibition at 7:30 p.m. will feature youngsters from the Fontana YMCA Boxing Club. Youngsters 10 and 11 years old will fight three rounds of 1½ minutes each.

Tickets priced at $4.50 and $2.50 are on sale at the Municipal Auditorium box office, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. For reservations, call 885-7344.

Garey falls to Rowland in opener

POMONA — In a pitcher's duel here Wednesday, Rowland High handed Garey High its first loss of the season by 3-1 count in a contest that saw only six hits between the two squads.

One of those hits, however, was a home run by Rowland's Roy Passwaters which put the Raiders ahead 2-0 in the third and proved to be the winning run. Winning hurler Al Emeterio had driven in the first Rowland tally in the top of the first.

Losing pitcher John Andrzejewski went the distance for the Vikings, allowing only three hits but suffering from faulty Garey fielding. Only Passwaters homer was earned off Andrezejewski.

Robbie Franklin, Pete Mendez, and Andrzejewski had the Garey base hits. Catcher Tom Hosack scored the only Viking run in the third on a mark at 1-1 with the win, while Garey is now 0-1. Next game for the Vikes will be Friday as they play host to Riverside North. Dan Ross is expected to start for Garey.

Rozelle earns new pact

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Contract talks between National Football League owners and the Players Association will begin next month with one thing for certain —Pete Rozelle is here to stay as commissioner.

The owners gave Rozelle, one of the favorite targets of the Players Association, a mandate Wednesday when it was announced that they had torn up his old 10-year-contract, signed in 1968, and replaced it with a new 10-year pact worth approximately $200,000 a year.

The contract runs from Jan. 1, 1973, presumably for tax purposes, until Dec. 31, 1982.

The announcement of the new contract for Rozelle, considered the most powerful commissioner in sports, came as a bit of a surprise. Rozelle was addressing a news conference about problems with television ratings when the question was asked about his future.

"I think we'll have something to say about that tomorrow," he said.

Moments later, Rozelle excused himself and had a brief conference with Jim Kensil, the NFL's executive director. At the end of the news conference, Rozelle asked newsmen to remain and Lamar Hunt, owner of the Kansas City Chiefs and president of the American Conference, made the announcement.

"We've got a new 10-year contract for Pete," Hunt said. "He's been commissioner of the National Football League since 1966 to the present and he has been one of the most successful commissioners in sports. In 14 years under his leadership, dating back to the pre-merger days, it has been a period of great success for the NFL. All 26 teams are in a profit-making position and this is the only sport which can say that. The sport has grown from 12 teams to 26, including 25 cities, and there are 1,200 men earning their livlihood playing for the league."

Hunt said the contract included, "a sizeable increase in salary."

Rozelle admitted that his decision to remain as commissioner came after receiving some very lucrative offers from the business world.

"I did have some very enticing offers," the 47-year-old Rozelle said, "But I have no plans to change. This is what I know best and this is what I want to do."

Rozelle was named NFL commissioner in 1960 after serving as general manager of the Los Angeles Rams. Following the merger of the National and American Leagues in 1966, he became head of the 26-team league.

Rozelle's contract renewal announcement came after a day-long session in which coaches, with recommendations to the owners regarding rules changes, and owners received a report on fines and television ratings.

"We had 19 of the 26 coaches at the meeting and they each made recommendations to the owners and the competition committee," Rozelle said. "Each club had a chance to express its opinion. Each coach talked and made suggestions. For the most part, the coaches felt they had an excellent game. Most thought they would like to see more offense in the game but coaches are less inclined than owners to make changes."

Rozelle said the rules discussed included two-point conversions, moving the goal posts to the end line, returning missed field goal attempts to the line of scrimmage, kicking off from the 30 instead of 40-yard line, added protection for pass reveivers, better definition of holding and two feet in bounds for sildeline pass receptions.

The competition committee— Jim Finks of Minnesota, Tex Schramm of Dallas, Al Davis of Oakland and Paul Brown of Cincinnati—will meet formally next week to discuss changes. They will make their final report to the owners in New York in June.

Regarding television, Rozelle said CBS ratings increased one per cent, NBC three and ABC nine, but that in the past, these would have been the first losses except for the fact that the ratings system was changed this year.

"This is the smallest increase since we've had television," Rozelle said. "We tried to tell Congress when they put in the blackout rule that television was not a bonanza. Only ABC had a real increase and that's because on Monday night they really don't have head-to-head competition."

On fines Rozelle said clubs were penalized a record amount last season, basically for "competitive violations". He said these included "player limits violations, comments made to the press and smaller fines for dress code violations, which have to do with cutting off knee and sleeves on uniforms and wearing contrasting tapes, and sideline violations."

Rozelle estimated the fines at $100,000.

Mountie gridders transfer to CSF

FULLERTON — Chuck Shrewsberry, a 6-1, 223-pound defensive tackle from Mt. San Antonio College has enrolled at Cal State Fullerton to continue his education and football career.

Shrewsberry captained the 1973 MSAC team before an elbow injury sidelined him for three of the last five games of the season. He was the nose guard in the Mounties' "53" defense.

Shrewsberry joins other former MSAC players Al Barnes, linebacker and team captain from the 1972 team; Lonnie Richardson, an offensive tackle from the '72 squad; and Mike O'Hara, an offensive tackle from the 1973 team, who was expected to report late at the Fullerton campus.

'Pack booters host Pioneer in CIF play

By JIM McCONNELL
P-B Staff Writer

CLAREMONT — Claremont High will take its second step toward the CIF soccer crown here Friday, as the Wolfpack will play host to Pioneer High.

The contest is slated for a 3 p.m. kickoff and will be played at Sumner Field in Claremont. Claremont won a coin toss to determine the site of the battle.

Coach Otto Rieger's booters opened CIF play in impressive fashion Tuesday, dumping Palm Springs 6-0 behind Gesner DoCarmo's four goals and two assists.

Pioneer was the champion of the Suburban League and beat Nogales 1-0 in their opening round game. Pioneer was unranked in the CIF soccer polls while Claremont ranked second in the latest voting.

DoCarmo has been the sparkplug of the Claremont offense, with 45 goals in league and CIF play so far. Jim Van Zee and Jesus Chavez also provide the Pack with plenty of scoring punch.

Pioneer is reported to have a fine defensive unit so it could be interesting for DoCarmo and company. Claremont has a fine defense of its own headed by Ralph Hawes and goalie Casey Roberts. The Wolfpack recorded shutouts in 11 of their 14 San Antonio League games. Claremont finished with an unblemished 14-0 league mark and sports a 23-2-1 season mark after the win over Palm Springs Tuesday.

Pioneer has been something of a darkhorse this season, as they were not picked to finish that high in the Suburban loop and were underdogs to Nogales in their opening CIF matchup. But they have been able to win the big ones so far, although Claremont will be their roughest assignment yet this season.

Sharks fall again, 5-4

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Sharks continued their losing ways with a 5-4 loss to Minnesota in the World Hockey Association Wednesday night.

The hapless Sharks, who have lost 12 of their last 13 games, managed to tie the game in the third period with goals by Gary Veneruzzo and Jim Niekamp, but the Fighting Saints came back only 31 seconds after Neikamp's tying goal to go ahead 5-4 on Ted Hampson's 12th goal of the season.

Mike Walton of the Saints moved to within two points of league leading scorer Gordie Howe of Houston with two assists to give him 82 points.

Wayne Connelly, also in the thick of the scoring race, put in two goals to give him 79 points.

The Saints have won six straight and 13 of their last 15 games for second place in the division.

Santa Barbara hosts Fresno in key contest

By United Press International

UC Santa Barbara calls on Fresno State tonight in the first of two crucial contests to decide who will represent the Pacific Coast Athletic Association in the NCAA tourney.

Come to think of it, there could be three crucials before that decision is reached.

Games with ineligible Long Beach don't count in determining the PCAA representative and in other games, Los Angeles State is 7-2 and UCSB 6-2 going into tonight's game at Fresno, which is 5-5 in the conference but a tough 16-7 for the season.

If Santa Barbara wins, Saturday's UCSB and Los Angeles State game will settle the NCAA representative. But if the Gauchos lose, they would have to win over the Diablos Saturday to set up a one-game playoff to decide who goes to the tourney.

Things are a little less confused in the West Coast Athletic Conference where USF takes a 11-1 record tonight into Seattle, which is 9-3.

Some other action tonight finds Nevada-Las Vegas at Pepperdine in a WCAC battle while a full PCAA slate brings San Jose State to Long Beach and UOP to San Diego State.

In Coast games Wednesday night, Idaho edged Washington State 74-70 although Steve Puidokas of the losers had 25 points. Washington State dropped to 7-18 for the season.

Paul Caldwell had 22 to lead Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference champ Whittier to a 91-75 win over La Verne. Whittier, 11-1 in the playoffs and 19-7 overall, advances to the NAIA District III playoffs, meeting Fresno Pacific at Biola College Saturday. Keith Washington led the losers with 21 points.

Claremont took a 78-40 SCIAC win over Cal Tech, which wound up the season with only one win. Redlands wound up second in the SCIAC with a 9-3 record and 16-10 season's mark after bouncing Pomona 85-63.

Eastern Washington edged Whittier 84-75.

KNX carries stretch calls from Los Al

LOS ALAMITOS — KNX Newsradio (1070) will again carry exclusive nightly stretch calls of all nine harness races during the upcoming 1974 Southern California Racing Association meeting which opens its third annual season at Los Alamitos Race Course on March 8.

A joint announcement of the nightly broadcasts was made by SCRA President Donald Kennedy and George Nicholaw, Vice President of CBS Radio Division and General Manager of KNX, recently.

The broadcasts will once again feature the voice of veteran race-caller Roy Shudt with the stretch calls aired approximately 10 minutes after the actual finish of the race beginning at 7:55 p.m. nightly with the exception of Sunday broadcasts which will begin at 6:40 p.m.

In addition, Kennedy announced the return of the popular Harness Hotline, a 24-hour service which features racing results, scratches, highlights and information by calling (714) 995-2222.

Post time during the nine-week SCRA meeting, which will be run on a Thursday through Tuesday basis, will be 7:45 p.m. (6:30 on Sunday) with a $2 Exacta on the first race and $5 Exactas on the sixth, eighth and ninth races.

Trojans forget UCLA

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The subject matter of Bob Boyd's lectures to his University of Southern California team this week has been UCLA, and the point is simple—forget about them.

The surging Trojans, tied with the Bruins for the top spot in the Pacific Eight Conference, could win their first league crown in 13 years by beating by UCLA on March 9. But before that is a possibility, Boyd keeps telling his players, the Trojans must take care of Stanford and California on the road this Friday and Saturday.

"I think Stanford, in particular, could knock us off," said Boyd, recalling USC's hard-fought 64-57 win over the Cardinals at home. "All season long we've warned the team about distractions and one distraction is looking ahead. I don't think that will happen, though, because we talk about concentrating so much."

Boyd's message has convinced Bob Trowbridge, his 6-8 sophomore forward, that USC isn't about to let up this weekend.

"We realize what these two games mean," said Trowbridge. "Both Stanford and Cal will be real tough up there. UCLA and our team are in for a rough time. A lot can happen in a weekend.

"Since we lost to Utah (90-66) and Washington State (71-56) we haven't taken anyone for granted."

The Trojans' only other loss was a 65-54 defeat by UCLA at Pauley Pavillion Feb. 2. Since then, the Trojans have won six straight, running their record to 9-2 in the Pac-8 and 20-3 overall, identical with UCLA.

"The last three weekends we've been playing our best ball," Trowbridge said. "Everybody is playing as a team and working together better."

Trowbridge spent the first part of his freshman year on USC's junior varsity. In his first game on the varsity, he scored 17 points and grabbed 13 rebounds. This season, Trowbridge has averaged 7.7 points a game, including a 25-point outburst against Washington State last week.

"I'm beginning to get the hang of things this year," he said. "I've still got a lot of things to learn, but I'm playing a little more relaxed this year. I felt uncomfortable last year, like I was too young to be out here. I feel like one of the guys this year."

Allowing himself to peek forward a week, Trowbridge assessed rival UCA.

"They're about the same as they were last year, although maybe they're not as hungry this year as (UCLA coach) John Wooden says. I think we're a much better team than last year. I really think we have a chance."

Quiet please! pro golfers need silence

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Golfers, like royalty, should not be spoken to unless they speak first.

That was the freshly-underlined code of conduct on the greens as play began today in the $150,000 Citrus Open.

Even the faintest click of a camera shutter will destroy a golfer's concentration, some of the pros claim.

The problem of maintaining quiet on the fairways came into focus Sunday at the $250,000 Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

When TV announcer Ray Scott yelled down from his tower to his old friend, Lee Trevino, the golfer came unglued, missed a 10-foot putt and put bogeys back to back.

Joe Dey, commissioner of theh PGA's Tournament Players Division, said, "No one in the media and no official should ever initiate a conversation with a player when he is on the course.

"If he strikes up a conversation with you (as Trevino often does), that's different," Dey said. "But media people, officials, spectators, no one should initiate a conversation with a player while he is playing his round."

Trevino was a prime target of the media when he arrived in Orlando for the Citrus Open on the 6,929-yard layout at Rio Pinar Country Club.

Trevino said the incident was blown out of proportion and that he had wired Scott that "no apologies are necessary." Scott had already issued a public apology.

An unseasonal cold front put a chill on Wednesday's pro-am preliminary, but the weatherman promised warmer weather when serious play began.

Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller will not play in the Citrus Open. Neither will aging Sam Snead, who had a recent hot streak in California.

Arnold Palmer, who owns the nearby Bay Hill Club and won here in 1972, is a crowd favorite, along with Leonard Thompson, the hulking Carolinian who won his first tournament last week, and defending champion Brian Allin.

Buffalo Braves can finally enjoy victory over Celtics

By United Press International

Anyway they can get it is the way the Buffalo Braves will take a victory over the Boston Celtics. The fact that John Havlicek was not on the court for the Celtics Wednesday night didn't diminish Buffalo's spirits one iota.

The Braves, behind Bob McAdoo's 37 points, beat Boston 122-104 for the first time in 23 meetings since they entered the National Basketball Association four years ago.

"They had a little more going for them psychologically," Celtics coach Tom Heinsohn said after the game at Providence, R.I. "We missed Havlicek. His leg was too sore and swollen, but he may be able to play Friday. He's an important part of our ball club and that's ultimately why we got beat tonight."

Buffalo coach Jack Ramsey, so swelled with enthusiasm after the victory that he was predicting even greater things should the two teams meet in the playoffs, agreed with Heinsohn about the effects of Havlicek's absence.

"We've played better games against Boston than tonight. They usually play well against us, but tonight they didn't. They missed Havlicek," Ramsey said. "He's a big part of their ball club, but I feel that we can beat Boston if we play against them in the playoffs."

Ernie DiGregorio, the Braves' candidate for rookie-of-the-year honors, made his second regular season appearance of the year before his hometown fans, and came up with 11 assists and 20 points. He starred for Providence College and was a big favorite of the crowd.

"When we run, we can run with any club, even Boston," DiGregorio said. "We don't have the personnel to play a tough defense, but we have the great shooters and when we run we can usually open one man or another."

Dave Cowens scored 20 points for Boston while Jo Jo White added 15.

The two teams meet again Friday in Buffalo.

In other games, Kansas City-Omaha beat Atlanta 85-76, Capital edged Seattle 104-100, Los Angeles nipped Milwaukee 110-108 and Chicago downed Phoenix 107-95.

Kings 85 Hawks 76

Don Kojis scored 20 points to lead Kansas City-Omaha over Atlanta. Both teams played give-away with a multitude of turnovers but the Kings got together late in the fourth period after the Hawks had come from five points down to take a two-point lead, 70-68 with 7:05 left. The Kings then outscored the Hawks 13-2 over the next five and a half minutes and the Hawks couldn't challenge again. Atlanta was led by rookie Dwight Jones with 17 points, 15 in the second half.

Bullets 104, Supersonics 100

Kevin Porter hit two free throws with two seconds left to ice Capital's victory over Seattle. Phil Chenier hit a 20-foot jumper with 1:23 remaining to give Capital a 102-100 lead. Seattle center Spencer Haywood then missed a chance to tie the game with a layup and as the clock ran down, the Sonics' John Hummer fouled Porter. Chenier finished with 25 points while Elvin Hayes added 24 points and grabbed 27 rebounds. Fred Brown scored 20 of his 28 points in the second half for the losers and Haywood finished with 20 points.

Bulls 107, Suns 95

Howard Porter came off the bench to lead Chicago past Phoenix with 23 points, including 18 in the first half when he hit seven of 10 field goals and four straight free throws during a 12-minute stint. Norm Van Lier had 18 points and 13 assists for the Bulls. Chet Walker added 16, Jerry Sloan 15 and Bob Love 14 in the balanced attack.

Big raise for Rose; Hank feels relaxed

By United Press International

The pressure seems to be off for both Pete Rose and Hank Aaron.

Rose signed his 1974 Cincinnati Reds contract Wednesday for an estimated $160,000 that represented "the biggest raise in my career." He was paid $118,000 last year.

Obviously relaxed, Rose quipped: "Now, I can pay that $250 fine I received during last year's playoff," referring to his run-in with New York Mets shortstop Bud Harrelson at Shea Stadium.

Aaron said at the opening of the Atlanta Braves spring training camp in West Palm Beach, Fla., that, "I think I have plenty of time to break Babe Ruth's home run record. I hope to hit 40 this year."

Aaron, looking as trim at 40 as he did as a rookie 20 years ago, needs one more home run to tie the 714 established by the immortal Ruth.

"I feel no pressure at all...I feel like I know what I have to do to get in shape," Aaron said after a morning workout and prior to taking the afternoon off to play golf.

The Chicago White Sox came to terms with third baseman Bill Melton and then welcomed first baseman Dick Allen for one of his earliest arrivals at a training camp. Allen said he was anxious to get started after missing more than three months of 1973 because of a leg fracture.

Ron Santo, new in ramp after 14 years with the crosstown Cubs, said "it feels strange. I feel like a kid, I'm so nervous."

Absences at a couple of camps were noted when infielder Teddy Martinez and special instructor Willie Mays failed to show at the Mets workout in St. Petersburg, Fla., and the Houston Astros, at Cocoa, Fla., reported that relief hurler Jerry Johnson and utility men Cliff Johnson and Ignacio Javier failed to appear as scheduled.

Los Angeles Dodgers manager Walter Alston decided to hold heart-to-heart talks with his players to determine "if we are thinking along the same lines in terms of the weaknesses each of our players must work on this spring." Pitchers Don Sutton and Al Downing and catcher Joe Ferguson remain unsigned.

Pitching coach Whitey Ford reported New York Yankee righthander Steve Kline appears well recovered from a sore right elbow that sidelined him most of last season. Kline showed good velocity on his fastball and sinker, the stock in trade for his 16 victories two years ago.

Sagehens look for 'easier' baseball year

CLAREMONT — The coming baseball season promises to be much easier for Pomona-Pitzer coach Mike Riskas.

Riskas is scheduled to open the 1974 season Saturday with a doubleheader against UC San Diego. This year Riskas is going into the season with a roster of 20 players. Last year the Sagehens started with 12 players. With injuries taking their toll, Riskas came close several times to not being able to put nine players on the field.

"It certainly is much more pleasant this year," said Riskas. "We're able to organize practices, run our drills and function properly. The kids are playing better because of it. There's competition and the guys are hustling." Riskas will determine his opening day lineup after two scrimmages this week.

However, he has his lineup set down the middle. Veteran Biff Sherman will see a lot of early season duty behind the plate. He'll be backed by Dave Dickter.

"It gives us more balance overall," explained Riskas. "Dickter is a pre-Med student and can only make a couple of practices a week. As a result he doesn't know the pitchers as well as Sherman. As the season progresses, Dickter will catch more and Sherman will see more duty in the outfield."

Two freshmen, Buck Perry and Greg Holden, will be at second base and shortstop. "They're doing a fine job," commented Riskas. "Perry looks to be the best second baseman I've ever had. Holden has a fine arm and between them we're turning over double plays much faster than last year."

Paul Miller, a pitcher-outfielder last year, will concentrate on center field this year. "We'll be strong up the middle," promised Riskas. "Third base and pitching are likely to be our problem areas."

Bob Hoehn, a 6-6, 195 pound basketball player, is currently pencilled in at the hot corner. Hoehn's best position was catcher, but bad knees prevent him from playing there.

Veterans David Jones and Jon Blacker will be entrusted with the bulk of the pitching with freshman Ed Vega the third man in the rotation.

Russians balk, relent finally in dispute on women's event

MOSCOW (UPI) The Soviet Union has ended a two-day dispute by agreeing to include a womens 600-meter run in the Soviet-American indoor track meet Saturday, a U.S. team spokesman said today.

The United States brought Robin Campbell of Washington, D.C., and Wendy Koenig, 18, of Denver, Colo., to Moscow to compete in the 600-meter event.

But the Soviets balked on Tuesday, saying they had not scheduled that event and indicating they had no runners lined up for it.

The U.S. spokesman said the dispute was resolved Wednesday night at a meeting of team officials from both sides. "It was no concession by the Russians, because the same event was run at the meet last year in Richmond, Va.," he said.

The spokesman said the last two American athletes arrived Wednesday and today. They are Maren Seidler of Chicago, the U.S. champion in the womens shot put, and Martha Watson of Long Beach, Calif., a sprinter and long jump competitor.

The U.S. team members spent Thursday morning shopping for souvenirs of the Soviet Union and scheduled their third workout in the afternoon.

La Verne, Claremont compete

APC defends title in own tourney

AZUSA — Tom Nelson was happy his Cougars could win their own tournament a year ago. Asking for consecutive championships may be a tough assignment.

With what has been described as "the best tournament field ever," the Cougars open defense of the Azusa Pacific Baseball Tournament Friday against Occidental College at 2:30 p.m. Cal Baptist meets University of San Diego at Citrus College, Cal State Dominguez Hills faces La Verne at La Verne, and Claremont-Mudd tangles with Cal Lutheran in Claremont in other first round games of the seventh annual tournament. All games are at 2:30 p.m.

The Cal Baptist-USD wnner meets the Dominguez-La Verne victor at Citrus College Saturday and the Azusa Pacific-Oxy and Claremont-Mudd—Cal Lutheran winners vie at Azusa in 10:30 a.m. games. First round losers are set for consolation action at La Verne and Claremont at 10:30 a.m. The tourney's championship game will be at Azusa, third place at Citrus, consolation championship at Claremont, and seventh place at La Verne in 2:30 p.m. games Saturday.

"All teams entered this year appear to have a shot at winning the title," said Nelson.

"USD, La Verne, and Claremont all have had excellent teams in the past and would appear to be the ones to beat. We were fortunate to be able to play three good games back-to-back to win last year. It will be a tough encore," he added.

La Verne, NAIA national champion two years ago, has won two tournament titles, the last in 1972 over Westmont. The Leos won the initial championship in 1968. They have reached the final round five times, losing last year to the Cougars.

"I'm happy with our progress so far," said Nelson. "We lost a pair of games at the University of Arizona. That's the best team we have ever played in baseball. Our defense has been lacking at times, but if we make steady progress we should be ready for district division play."

Coach Nelson's Cougars tuned up for tourney play by dropping a 5-2 duke to Cal State Fullerton Wednesday. Southpaw hurler Ed Romero went the distance for the Titans, scattering nine hits and fanning 11 Cougars.

Azusa Pacific's Sinnard enjoys chance with Oilers

AZUSA — Greg Sinnard wasn't asking for much. Just a chance.

"Now I know how others must have felt after realizing a dream had come true," said the 23-year-old former Cougar football and baseball star. He had just signed a three-year professional football contract with the Houston Oilers and the joy he felt was reflected in the grin on his face.

"At some time in every athlete's career he hopes to play professionally," he said. "For some the goal is very realistic. Others have an outside chance. And some live only with dreams. I'm not sure which category I fit into, but I know I am happy and anxious to see if I can make it as a professional football player."

While the 6-2, 200-pounder excelled in kicking as a football player, his baseball prowess led to a pro baseball contract which he signed with the Minnesota Twins last summer. He was a first team NAIA all-American after batting .401 with nine home runs, 30 runs batted in, 67 hits (25 for extra bases), 115 total bases, and a .689 slugging percentage with the Cougars. He played at Ft. Lauderdale in the Florida State League last summer.

But his future appears to be with football.

"I have a chance to play in the big leagues right now," he said. "I enjoyed playing baseball, but the chances for advancement weren't quite as good as football. I feel confident I can perform well enough to earn a sustained career in football."

The wait for that chance was a long one, and Sinnard admits there were times when he almost gave up hope.

During his senior year in football with the Cougars in 1972 he punted 47 times for 1,931 yards, a 41.1 average. That was good enough for the best mark on the West Coast and ranked him sixth in the nation. Average, however, was only part of his football-kicking talent.

His teammates nicknamed him "Boomer" and by the sight of some of his punts, they were right. In two seasons as punter, Sinnard kicked 87 times. On 33 occasions the distance weas 45 yards or more. Four times he kicked it over 70 yards and he holds the record for longest kick with an 89-yarder against U.S.D.

Sinnard was overlooked in the pro draft in January, 1973 because he was incorrectly listed as a junior. The following year he was listed again, but didn't play football because he had used up eligibility. After several inquiries by coach Jerry Sconce, who calls Sinnard "the best college punter I've ever seen", things started happening.

"Several teams were interested," said Sconce. "Jerry Shay of the New York Giants saw him punt and was impressed. The Giants had just signed a pair of free agent kickers, though, and couldn't use another prospect. Then John Math of the Oilers called and said he'd like to confirm what he had heard about the "Boomer".

"Greg always has been consistent with his kicking and the day he performed he averaged over 46 yards a punt. He had good release and held several kicks in the air from five to seven seconrds. That was enough. Then came the contract."

Sinnard's athletic career was nearly ended in his freshman year when he broke his leg while riding a motorcycle. He returned swiftly, but suffered a broken jaw in his senior year. He played the final two-thirds of the season with a wired jaw.

"That was an amazing thing," recalls Sconce. "The rest of the team sensed his competitive spirit and when he was back there no one was going to get him."

A former Anaheim resident who returned to Santa Ana College for his sophomore year, Sinnard becomes the first Cougar football player to be signed by a professional team. Chris Jones, Bill McCorkle, Gary Prestesater, Gerry Nelson, Mike Singer, and Tom Talbott all signed baseball contracts after playing for the Cougars.

"It's an honor to be selected and I hope I can put my heart into my work," he said.

And when he puts his foot into the ball, it soars.

Olivares hopeful of chance at crown

INGLEWOOD — At the young age of 25, Ruben Olivares is looking at the world featherweight championship and provided he can make amends with Art Hafey Monday at The Forum, there is a strong possibility that he will get his chance.

Olivares as a bantamweight champion, ranks with the all-time greats. His knockout record was awesome and was tops for the 118-pound division.

In fact as punchers go, Ruben was right in there with sockers like Rocky Marciano, Joe Frazier, Archie Moore, Joe Louis, George Foreman and other KO stars.

Olivares, a graduate of a Hell's Kitchen section of Mexico City, launched his career in 1965. He won his first 22 bouts by knockouts. A fellow by the name of Felipe Gonzalez managed to last 10 rounds.

The son of streak was started soon after Gonzalez and extended for 30 fights till ended by Chucho Castillo going 15 rounds at The Forum in 1970.

Finding it difficult to make the 118-pound bantam limit, Olivares decided to move into the featherweight class following the loss of his title to Rafael Herrera in Mexico City, March 19, 1973.

He began his featherweight title March last year at The Forum, knocking out well-regarded Walter Seeley of New York, April 28.

Olivares roared right back on June 23 to hand Bobby Chacon his first setback — via a knockout in ten rounds.

Then disaster struck on September 15 in Monterrey, Mexico.

Short, stocky heavy punching Art Hafey floored the favored former banty king four times enroute to a sixth round knockout.

Ruben admitted he didn't train like he should and took Hafey lightly.

"It will be different on March 4. I can't afford to lose, so it will be Hafey's turn to hit the canvas," yells a confident Ruben Olivares.

Going into the Hafey fight, Olivares has a sparkling record — 71 wins, four losses and one draw — highlighted by 64 knockouts — best ever for a little man in boxing history.

Ravens, Condors go on to state AYSO meet

CLAREMONT — The Claremont Ravens and Condors will be representing the Claremont in the American Youth Soccer Organization state playoffs for girls.

The Ravens and Condors earned the right to represent Claremont in Division III and II action by winning their respective leagues. Both teems will receive their honors at the annual Claremont AYSO Soccer Day on March 10 at Pomona College's Alumni Field.

In opening round play on March 9, the Condors will travel to Upland while the Ravens will take on Altadena at Oakmont Field at 2 p.m.

The Ravens, coached by Penny Zagorski, outscored their opponents, 53-7, for an 11-1 record. Members of the team are Jill Bentley, Janet Bentley, Missy Boer, Elaine Carlson, Colleen Fogarty, Connie Gallagher, Rosie Lynch, Mary Monroe, Kathy Olin, Colleen Olin, Pat Ronneburg, Laura Scheiling, Leslie Thomas, Mary Wicks and Marcia Zagorski.

Coach Audrey Folden's Condors compiled a 10-2-3 record as they outscored the opposition, 32-16. Team members are Jamie Bagley, Ann Becker, Hannah Cole, Debbie Doran, Michelle Folden, Molly Herman, Mary Kasper, Katie McDermott, Susan McDermott, Laura Myers, Sarah Oss, Shella Swick and Becky Zavala.

Southland racing

CORONA — The Figure Eight and Claiming Stock Cars of the Corona Auto Racing Association will be competing for the second time this season, this Sunday afternoon at Corona Raceway beginning at 2 p.m.

The first program of the year for the Figure Eights and Claimers proved to be quite an exciting and wild affair with over 40 cars competing.

Heading the list of Figure Eight drivers who will be at Corona is last season's point champion and winner of the first Figure Eight Main event this year, Jack Twitchell of San Dimas. Twitchell looked like a sure champion in the first race, as he completely ran away from the rest of the field to the win.

GARDENA — An American Motorcycle Association regional championship event and the last California United States Auto Club midget race of the spring, feature the March schedule at Ascot Park.

J. C. Agajanian, chairman of the board at Ascot, will stage the motorcycle regional as an Agajanian Enterprises production. Most of the big names in AMA are expected for this 100-lap TT steeplechase, Sunday afternoon, March 24.

IRWINDALE — Undefeated in the first four CMC pro motocross events of the year at Irwindale Raceway, all in the month of February, young Jeff Vidic of Glendale puts his winning streak on the line this Friday night at 7:30 hoping to set a track record five straight victories in the 250cc Pro class.

Last Friday he tied the mark of four in a row set by Dave Pessy of Torrance in the final four meetings last season. And, as it should be, it is getting tougher and tougher for the young man in the neck brace (still recovering from a crushed vertebrae) to win. Bryar Holcomb of Sunland and Jim West of South Pasadena represented the opposition last time out and they nearly proved to be too much.

IRWINDALE — The door to the winner's circle at San Gabriel Valley Speedway in Irwindale stands wide open as claimer stock car racing opens the 1974 season Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Two time United States Racing Club champion, Steve Parrish has retired from the rough and tumble claimer stock car racing sport leaving speculation over who will fill his shoes running at a fever pitch.

Parrish is moving into super stock car racing following a record setting 1973 season that saw him win 12 main events and set fast time for 28 out of 30 race meets. He broke the track record seven times in 1973.

VALENCIA — Contrary to what seemingly has become a present trend of shortages; the shortage that does not exist is that of rider participation for the twice-weekly motocross racing programs at Indian Dunes.

While continuing to feature near-capacity fields of competition contestants, management at the 600-acre off-road complex that is located just ten miles north of San Fernando is expecting a turnout of 500 dirt-track motorcyclists — including a number of the nation's top professional riders — for moto events this weekend on three separate courses.

On Friday night, beginning at 6, a large entry of riders running under CRC sanction will see action on the Dunes' fast International track during a 30-heat program that will award double points towards season championships.

Defensemen get offensive in NHL action

By United Press International

As easy as Bobby Orr may make it seem, it is still a rare feat indeed when a defenseman scores 20 goals in a season.

In fact, until this season, it had been accomplished only seven times in National Hockey League history, and on five of those occasions Orr was the perpetrator. The other two defensemen were Flash Hollett with 20 goals for Detroit in 1944-45 and Brad Park with 24 goals for the New York Rangers two years ago.

Orr, of course, already has passed the 20-goal plateau this season for a sixth time, and on Wednesday night Park became the only other defenseman to reach that height for a second time. The Ranger All-Star notched his 20th goal with only 6:38 left to play and it proved to be the winner as New York beat the Vancouver Canucks, 42.

"I'd been thinking about it," Park related when asked about the 20th goal. "I said to myself, 'Jeez, it'd be nice to do it again so that you don't think you just got lucky once.' Now it gives me a lot of personal satisfaction to know I've done it twice."

Oddly, just before Park took the ice for that fateful goal, he heard a fan yell out behind him, "Hey, Park, why don't you go out and earn your money."

The victory was the fifth in a row for the Rangers, who have lost only one of their last 15, and it moved them to within four points of second-place Montreal in the East Division of the National Hockey League.

The Canucks, who have played close to .500 hockey with eight wins and three ties in the 20 games since Phil Maloney took over as coach, lost a chance to move out of the East cellar.

The Chicago Black Hawks climbed into a tie with idle Philadelphia for first place in the West by beating the Minnesota North Stars, 3-1, the Pittsburgh Penguins beat the Los Angeles Kings, 4-1, and the St. Louis Blues and California Golden Seals skated to a 2-2 tie in other NHL games.

Vancouver twice took one-goal leads in the game at New York, first on a goal by defenseman Dennis Kearns and then on one by Dennis Ververgaert. But Jean Ratelle netted his 22nd and 23rd goals of the season in the second period to bring the Rangers even each time.

The first of Ratelle's goals, as well as the insurance goal by Bill Fairbairn in the closing minutes, came on power plays.

Black Hawks 3, North Stars 1

Dennis Hull scored two goals for Chicago, his 24th and 25th of the season, while goaltender Tony Esposito turned aside 28 shots. Lynn Powis scored the other goal for the Black Hawks while Bill Goldsworthy got the only Minnesota goal.

Blues 2, Golden Seals 2

Stan Weir scored with only nine seconds left to play to enable California to earn its tie against the Blues, who nevertheless moved into sole possession of third place in the West, one point ahead of Atlanta. The Seals pulled goalie Gilles Meloche in favor of a sixth skater with 48 seconds remaining and Weir connected for his eighth goal. It was the first point for California after four losses since Marshall Johnston replaced Fred Glover as coach.

Claremont soccer teams win

CLAREMONT — The Claremont Stars of Division 3 and Division 5 of the Pacific Soccer League enjoyed wins last weekend in PSL Cup play to advance to the semifinals on March 9.

In last week's action, the Division 5 Stars defeated Long Beach, 10-0, with goals by Allen Pitts 3, Larry Jackson 3, Henry Gonzales 2, Steve Mason 1 and James Ratajczak while the Division 3 Stars scored a 1-0 voctory over the Artesia Telestars. These teams host Torrance and Fountain Valley this Saturday at El Roble Intermediate School resuming Division playoff games.

The Division 4 Spittin' Image Knights were defeated by the Torrance Celtic Gunners, 3-1, in the final game of regular season play. Claremont's goal was scored by Todd Hart. Tony Massagli and John Carroll helped on the front line. The Knights finished fourth in division standings and will now begin PSL Cup sudden death playoff on March 9 in Long Beach against the St. Stephen's Celtics.

In other action Saturday, the Peterson Pharmacy Division 3 Kings will host the Fullerton Rangers in a Division playoff game.

Recreation

Action began Wednesday night in the Trophy King Awards basketball tournaments. I make that plural because there are five separate sections in this event. All of it is sponsored by Harry Whitney's trophy shop.

First on tap are the seventh grade teams. Four of the 10 squads played Wednesday night with the remainder hitting the boards on Friday. On the same evening six of the 8th grade squads begin play in their division while the others start on March 6.

Games are at Emerson Junior High this evening beginning at 6 p.m. Friday's schedule includes four seventh grade contests at Palomares Junior High starting at 5:30 p.m. and three eighth grade games at Simons Junior High at the same time.

Saturday, the elementary girls division begins play at Marshall Jr. High at 10 a.m. Six teams will play for the city title.

On Monday evening at Palomares Junior High, eight elementary boys squads will vie for the city crown. They are the top eight from 21 that played in league action.

The final division of this concluding event for youth basketball is the junior high girls. Eight squads will start play on Friday, March 15. They still have two league games to play.

The favorites in these tournaments are usually the teams with the best league records. However, when you are dealing with boys and girls between the ages of 9 and 14 anything can happen.

One on One Winners

One tournament in the Pomona Park and Recreation Departments youth basketball programs has concluded. The Second Annual One on One Contest was held last Saturday. Participation was open to boy boys and girls however in the finals it was an all male field.

The six junior recreation programs provided two representatives in each division. They were the winners of each area's tournament. Over 600 youngsters participated.

The Palomares Junior High Recreation captured eight of the top twelve spots. They were blanked only in the eight grade division. Leo Lewis and his staff of Dorothy Dunn, Chip Hazen, Mark Lambert and Jim McCain are to be congratulated on the fine performance of their pupils.

Soccer day a great one

The Pomona AYSO soccer organization concluded activities for the season last Sunday at Palomares Park. Team picnic; award ceremonies and exhibition all star games were all part of the program.

President Adrian Mercado and his staff had everything well planned. The program ran smoothly. With over 500 kids and parents in attendance that was a real accomplishment.

The best thing about the day was the weather. Adrian couldn't have ordered better. The local AYSO group is to be congratulated on the fine program and season.

Twenty-five teams played this year. That representes close to 400 boys. Next year they will add girls. It is a big operation that needs hardworking volunteers. Fortunately, Pomona's AYSO has them.

Pomona AYSO teams enter playoffs

By ADRIAN MERCADO
P-B Correspondent

POMONA — The Pomona Police Relief Association Rangers of Division I, the Pomona Police Relief Association Marauders of Division II, and the Pomona First Federal Jackrabbits of Div. III have been declared the Pomona representatives for the upcoming American Youth Soccer Organization (AYSO) State Championship Playoffs. The finals are sheduled for April 6 at El Camino College Stadium in Torrance.

The Rangers, coached by Al Acevedo, will travel to La Mirada on March 9, and if they defeat their hosts will play at home on March 16 against the winners between Manhattan Beach and Santa Monica.

The Marauders earned their playoff berth by nipping the Renegades 1-0. Both teams played at a gruelsome pace with both teams gaining momentary advantages. Early in the first half, Marauder David Carey slammed the black and white sphere into the Renegade net for the only score of the game. On March 9 the Marauders, coached by Art Trater, will face Diamond Bar at Pomona High, and, if victorious, will travel the following day to either La Mirada or Downey.

The Jackrabbits, coached by Steve McClain, earned their playoff spot by nipping the tough Falcons, 1-0. After a scoreless first half the Jackrabbits finally got on the scoreboard on a hand-ball penalty kick scored by Travis Hayes. The Jackrabbits will host Diamond Bar on March 9 and will be away at either La Mirada or Downey for another qualifying round on March 10.

More than 1,000 persons attended Palomares Park last Sunday to celebrate Pomona Soccer Day. Amid pot-luck picnics, refreshments, and general merryment three exciting games were played.

For the second year in a row the Coaches-Referees team nipped the Div. I All-Stars by identical 2-1 scores. Pat Crites, a "now generation," outran the All-Star defense and blasted in both goals; Jimmy Fox placed the All-Stars on the scoreboard in the second half with a well placed goal. The time-abbreviated game favored the coaches as they were rapidly weakening before the final whistle sounded.

The second game featured the Div. II Red Vs. Blue League All-Stars. The Blue offense showed its superiority by scoring four goals by the effort Robert Navarrete (2), Rusty Grimes (1), and Santos Franco (1). Jon Traber tallied the solo goal for the Reds on a penalty kick.

The final game pitched the Div. III Red Vs. Blue League All-Stars. Both teams looked equally balanced but the Reds Ron Terifaj shot a goal at the two minute mark of the initial period to secure the victory for his team.

Phil LaPierre of the Pomona Parks & Recreation Department was guest of honor and was present for the awarding of trophies to league leaders and All-Stars.

SIDELINES: Pomona AYSO will hold soccer clinics at Palomares Park during the summer for coaches and referees as well as separate clinics for boys and girls. Dates and times will be announced at a latter date . . . a 16-18 senior division is almost a reality for next season; boys who are interested should call 624-8922 to give name, address, telephone number and date of birth.

Pintos, Toros to represent Diamond Bar

DIAMOND BAR — The Pintos and Toros will be representing the Diamond Bar-Walnut American Youth Soccer Organization (AYSO) in the state playoffs beginning March 9.

The Pintos defeated the Mustangs, 1-0, to capture the Division III title while the Toros downed the Pioneers, 2-0, to take top honors in Division II play.

Other activities on the final day of regular season activity at Lorbeer Junior High included awards for individual team members, an All-Star game, a coaches-referees game and a moms game.

NCAA wrestlers meet at Fullerton

FULLERTON — Cal Poly San Luis Obispo is favored to annex its seventh consecutive National Collegiate Division II Wrestling Championship this weekend at Cal State Fullerton.

The Mustangs of coach Vaughan Hitchcock have won the last six NCAA wrestling crowns under the old "College Division" heading and seven of the last eight, dating back to 1966. The NCAA's reorganization places Cal Poly SLO in Division II.

The Mustangs will rely on undefeated 190-pounder Keith Leland, who finished second to Fletcher Carr of Tampa in the 1973 meets at South Dakota State University.

Hitchcock teams hold an impressive record of 186-39-2 against all comers over the years, including many Division I teams and have never lost a dual match against another California school, holding a 128-0 record against the likes of Pacific-8 Conference and Pacific Coast Athletic Conference powers.

A total of 16 all-America performers from 1973 return to the 1974 meet at Cal State Fullerton, including two individual champions in the 10 different weight divisions.

Phil Reimnitz of North Dakota State University brings a 19-4-1 record in defense of his 126-pound title and Jim Kulpa of Western Illinois is back to defend his 177-pound crown.

Expected to challenge Cal Poly SLO for the team title are Northern Iowa and Mankato (Minn.) State. More than 60 institutions are expected to be represented with more than 300 competitors.

The 118-pound class will feature a pair of twins wrestlings for different institutions. Brad Thompson of Mankato State finished fourth last year and brother Bruce, of Clarion State, finished fifth.

The tourney opens Friday at 10 a.m. for preliminary rounds. Quarter-finals will be held Friday night at 7 p.m. The semi-final round begins at 12 p.m. Saturday and finals will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday night.

Tickets for the tourney are $1 for first round, $1.50 (general admission) and $2.50 (reserved) for the second and third rounds, and $2.50 (GA) and $3.50 (reserved) for the final round. All competition will be held in Titan Gym.

An all-sessions ticket is being sold for $7.50 (reserved).

Set class for backpacking

AZUSA — A special class in camping and backpacking for individuals and families is offered by the Azusa Parks and Recreation Department beginning March 5, at 7 p.m. in the Recreation Center.

The Tuesday-Thursday class lasting three weeks will be taught by Ernest Doiron experienced camper and hiker. Doiron has hiked from Maine to Florida, covered the John Muir Trail, and made numerous trips into Baja California.

The fee is $7 for individuals and $10 for families. The session will conclude with an overnight camping March 30.

Individuals should register by mail or in person between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. at the Recreation Center in Memorial Park, 320 N. Orange Place, Azusa. For further information call 334-5125, ext. 220.

Shrine football classic slates new format

There will be some changes in the 23rd annual Shrine North-South Football Game.

This year's session, staged in the interest of the Shriners Crippled Childrens Hospital, will be played at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena on July 27. It will not feature a team from Northern California.

Instead, two Southern California teams will compete — one from the North area, and one from the South area.

Each high school grid team will have a roster of 28 players, which will give possible exposure to 50 communities in Southern California, as compared to 20 in the past.

Although it has not yet been determined whether the contest will be played in the afternoon or in the evening, there will be no pre-game pageant, thus placing emphasis on the football game. However, a magnificent halftime show has been planned.

CIF Commissioner Kenneth Fagans and L.A. City Commissioner Jim Cheffers have drawn a "Mason-Dixon Line," roughly the Pomona Freeway as the dividing line.

Chino High will be the only local school in the jurisdiction of the South with the remainder of the valley teams representing the north. Rowland High, which is geographically located south of the dividing line, has been placed in the north's jurisdiction.

Olympic movie

MUNICH (UPI) — The official movie of the 1972 Summer Olympic Games, titled "Visions of Eight," originally was planned as the "Visions of Ten." Moviemakers David Woler and Stan Margulies first decided to use 10 noted directors to film different phases of the games as they saw them, but later they dropped two of them.

Chino National registers girls

CHINO — The Chino National Little League is holding signups for its girls' softball league.

Girls, ages 9-15, interested in playing softball can register from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at Gird Elementary School on Riverside Drive. Candidates must be accompanied by a parent and bring a birth certificate.

Later signups will be taken on Wednesday, March 6, from 7 to 9 p.m. and on Saturday, March 9, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Duck population reflects increase

SACRAMENTO — California's annual winter waterfowl survey for 1974 showed that duck populations increased 18 per cent over last winter, the Department of Fish and Game reported today.

Overall, the census tallied 5,605,000 ducks which was also an increase of 35 per cent over the 20-year average for these surveys. As usual, pintails were the most numerous with 3,341,000 tallied and they accounted for most of the increase in duck numbers. Other major species showing increases were widgeon (739,000), mallard (544,000) and green-winged teal (230,000). Shoveler numbers (476,000) were down from last year.

The count of geese (658,000) was up 37 per cent over last year. Snow geese at 431,000 birds predominated in the tally.

In most areas survey conditions were good, but in some areas of the San Joaquin Valley and coastal areas fog and poor visibility hampered the operations.

From the fall surveys it appeared that populations were at about the same level as the previous year. However, with a poor hunting season more birds showed up on the winter survey. Habitat conditions were ideal for the birds this year. The heavy rains created much temporary habitat and the birds made good use of it.

The winter survey, a cooperative effort of the DFG and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, is conducted annually at the close of the waterfowl hunting season.

Census methods include aerial estimates on the main concentration areas and ground counts in the outlying areas.

Results indicate the number of birds that will be returning to the nesting grounds from their wintering grounds in California.

In sportfishing

New regulations begin

SACRAMENTO — California's 2.3 million anglers may not recognize the 1974 sport fishing regulations booklet—the 32-page guide to rules taking effect Friday (March 1) — but they are going to have to live with it for a year.

The big change is a new format under which the state is divided into eight districts each with its own rules and regulations. Until this year, basic regulations were set forth by species and individual waters without respect to geographical area and nearly half the booklet was filled with exceptions to the basic rules.

According to the Department of Fish and Game, the new method is designed to simplify the regulations or at least to make them easier to follow.

Districts are the Southern, Colorado River, Central Coast, Sierra, Valley, North Coast and Delta inland fisheries districts, and the Ocean and San Francisco Bay Ocean Fishing District.

Opening dates for trout and salmon fishing seasons are April 27 for northern California streams, and streams and lakes in Mono and Inyo counties, and May 25 for north coast streams.

Seasons will run through Nov. 15 except in Mono and Inyo counties where the season will close Oct. 31 to protect from immediate harvest brood fish planted shortly before the end of the season.

Elsewhere in the state, streams are open all year. Lakes and reservoirs throughout the state with the exception of those in Mono and Inyo counties and as otherwise noted are open all year.

Changes in the regulations themselves will, among other things:

—Place all coastal counties containing salmon and steelhead streams under one general trout season. This adds Mendocino, Sonoma and Marin counties to the north coast season opening May 25.

—Place a year-around limit of five trout on all inland waters of Alameda and Contra Costa counties and in southern California, excepting Inyo and Mono counties and the Salton Sea-Colorado River area. The limit is now 10 trout from April to November, ifve the balance of the year.

—Open to fall and winter trout and salmon fishing every day the streams in San Mateo and Santa Clara counties—this to eliminate unnecessary restrictions on fishing during these periods.

—Permit management as wild steelhead streams many of these same waters, eliminating the summer trout fishery and thereby protecting juvenile fish where catchable trout are not planted.

—Redefine the boundaries of San Francisco Bay within which night fishing from shore is permitted, and add to Plumas County; Coyote Reservoir, Santa Clara County; the list of waters open to night fishing Bucks Lake, Folsom Lake, El Dorado, Placer and Sacramento counties; Apollo Lake, Los Angeles County, and those on Vandenberg Air Force Base, Santa Barbara County.

—Remove the size limit on golden trout in the Kern-Tulare Plateau and the Cottonwood Basin. Present size limit is 6 inches.

Fishermen will find that the Klamath River from Copco Lake to the Oregon border is now a wild trout stream with a five-trout limit, that the daily bag limit has been reduced from 10 to two on the wild trout section of Hot Creek, Mono County, and there are special regulations for Deep Creek in San Bernardino County, one of the south state's few remaining wild trout streams.

Other regulations changes:

(1) Establish a lures-only special flyfishing area on the Fall River, Shasta County; (2) shorten the length of the special flyfishing area on the lower Kings River in Fresno County; (3) reduce the length of the river covered by all-year closures on the Feather River in Butte County; (4) establish five-trout limits with the opening July 1 of Perris Lake in Riverside County and Pyramid Lake, Los Angeles County; and 5) closed to all fishing during the winter trout closure streams and rivers upstream from Melones Reservoir in Alpine, Calaveras and Tuolumne counties, and all streams and rivers east of State Highway 49 in Tuolumne County.

Bishop will stage annual trout derby

BISHOP — Bishop California, located in Owens Valley of the spectacular Eastern High Sierra Country, will be playing host to the Fifth Annual Owens River Trout Derby on Saturday, March 2, 1974. This event, which is sponsored by the Bishop Chamber of Commerce, is often referred to as the "Blind Bogey" trout derby.

This "Blind Bogey" trout derby is a contest which is designed to give all fishermen, young and old, an equal chance of winning. The way it works is that before Derby Day, one of the officials catches a trout which becomes the "Blind Bogey". This Blind Bogey is weighed by a Notary Public, the weight recorded, notorized and sealed in an envelope. The envelope is then placed in the safe at the Bishop City Hall until Derby Day.

On the day of the Derby, fishermen take their catch to the check-in station where each fish is weighed and entered. Since the winter trout limit is five fish, each fisherman has five possible chances to win. At 5:00 P.M. on Derby Day, the envelope containing the weight of the Blind Bogey is opened and the weight is announced. The trout coming to closest to the Blind Bogey weight is the Grand Prize winner. The other prizes are awarded to the second closest and so on-last year's Blind Bogey for the derby weighed 1 lb. 2 oz. Names are drawn out of a hat in the event of a tie, which was the case last year as we had thirteen entries that weighed 1 lb. 2 oz. You can see that the biggest fish doesn't necesarily win and the point was proven last year as a 7 lb. 4 oz. Brown Trout was entered as the biggest fish, yet it was far out of the running for any of the prizes.

Anglers warned on error in regulations

BIG BEAR — California anglers are being cautioned that the 1974 sportfishing regulations which go into effect on Friday contain an error regarding fishing hours at Big Bear Lake in San Bernardino County.

The section on fishing hours mistakenly lists Big Bear Lake as one of the waters in Southern California that will be open day and night for fishing.

Legal fishing hours at Big Bear Lake will be from one hour before sunrise to one hour after sunset, according to Inspector Clifford Matthews, chief of the Department of Fish and Game's warden force for Southern California.

Matthews said wardens will issue citations to anglers found fishing at night at Big Bear Lake.

In the new regulations the state is divided into eight districts, each with its own rules. The new districts are the Southern, Colorado River, Central Coast, Sierra, Valley, North Coast and the Delta for inland fishing and the Ocean and San Francisco Bay District for ocean fishing.

The Southern District includes the counties of Santa Barbara, Ventura, Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego and the western portions of Riverside and San Bernardino Counties.

The Colorado River District includes Imperial County and the eastern portions of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties.

Waters in the Southern District which will be open to around-the-clock fishing are Evans Lake in Riverside County, Hemet Lake (from the shore only) in Riverside County, Apollo Lake, Hansen Lake, Legg Lake and Puddingstone Lake in Los Angeles County, Sherwood Lake in Ventura County and all waters in Coachella Valley.

In the Colorado River District fish can be taken legally day or night.

Copies of the new sportfishing regulations can be obtained without charge from sporting goods stores and Department of Fish and Game offices.

The department is urging all fishermen to check the new regulations before heading for their favorite fishing hole.

No answers to mercy killing

Should the law look the other way?

(EDITOR'S NOTE: NEA Science Editor David Hendin is author of the best seller "Death as a Fact of Life," which has just been published in paperback.)

By DAVID HENDIN

NEW YORK (NA) — Perhaps the most significant aspect of the recent "mercy killing," or "murder of convenience" trial of a Long Island, N.Y., surgeon is that the outcome was quite easily predictable.

Nobody, including the prosecutor, was really very surprised that the jury found Dr. Vincent A. Montemarano innocent of the murder of his patient, Eugene Bauer. Montemarano was accused of injecting a fatal dose of the drug potassium chloride into Bauer, a terminally ill cancer patient.

The trial never came up to the expectations of those who hoped for some sort of a new judicial precedent with regard to euthanasia or mercy killing. These subjects really never arose, although they existed as an emotional undercurrent throughout the trial. But it all came down to the simple question of whether a murder was committed.

Since the prosecution and the defense both sidestepped the mercy killing issue, it is no surprise that a new legal precedent was not set. Even if the court case were decided on a more philosophical basis, changes in case law are a far cry from legislating laws that would permit voluntary euthanasia or "death with dignity."

One can naturally expect laws in this area to change. But since law in our society is not really an accurate reflection of the sentiments of the community and professions, it can be expected that changes will only come when more laymen and physicians are willing to discuss actions that they already tacitly condone.

A similar process has taken place during recent years in the debate over abortion laws. The evolutionary process began in 1959 with the American Law Institute's model code recommendations, and continues today with heated discussion over the Supreme Court's abortion decision last year.

Today there is no country in the world that has yet legalized voluntary euthanasia in the case of terminal illness and suffering. Some countries have taken steps, however. Switzerland has laws that allow the physician to put a poison in the hand of the patient, but not actually administer it himself. In Norway, a judge may reduce the punishment for mercy killing below the minimum penalty normally fixed by law. England's Suicide Act of 1961 states that it is not illegal to attempt to commit suicide under any circumstances, although it is forbidden to assist another's suicide.

These beginnings are as far as any country has yet ventured toward legalizing any form of euthanasia. Some say that more countries have not taken such steps because of certain practical factors relating to the administration of existing laws against euthanasia.

In his 1957 book, "The Sanctity of Life and the Criminal Law," British jurist Glanville Williams notes that some of the same things that work actual law on euthanasia, an actual law on euthanasia, work in favor of a nonwritten law that actually permits the practice.

First of all, he writes, because of the evidence required it is very difficult to establish a charge against a physician who "murders" through the administration of a humane overdose of drugs. When a patient has been receiving large doses of such a drug, it is nearly impossible to determine the final dose or even whether it actually caused the death.

This very point arose in the Montemarano case when it was disclosed that the supposed "murder drug" potassium chloride was earlier used therapeutically in the patient.

Williams' second point is that prosecutors naturally will be reluctant to take action against a reputable physician who performed an act in good faith in a difficult situation.

This never came up in the Montemarano case, mainly because the "mercy killing" aspect was played down by both the prosecution and the defense.

The third point in favor of a nonwritten law favoring the practice of voluntary euthanasia, according to Williams, is that juries will be reluctant to convict a physician under such circumstances. It is clear that this aspect played a role in the Long Island jury's quick (one hour) deliberations before Montemarano was found innocent.

Finally, Williams points out, even the worst occurs and the physician is convicted of murder, executive clemency will most likely intervene to prevent too harsh a penalty on the accused.

These "nonwritten laws," or better yet, rules of thumb, may prove far better in the long run than a formal framework for the legal aspects of euthanasia. For when a law is passed there are invariably loopholes. And when the loopholes deal with the crucial matters of life and death they ure simply not acceptable.

Marxist guerrillas play cat-mouse game with Argentine armed force

By ROBERT E. SULLIVAN

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — The People's Revolutionary Army, a small Marxist guerrilla group, is waging a cat-and-mouse war with Argentina's armed forces. At times, it's hard to tell the cat from the mouse.

One guerrillo recently called Lt. Gen. Leandro Anaya, commander-in-chief of the Argentine army on his private phone and demanded to know what had happened to two missing comrades.

A surprised Anaya convinced the guerrilla his men didn't capture them. The People's Revolutionary Army, known by by its Spanish initials ERP, then called off the threatened execution of an army officer.

The incident indicates the grudging recognition, if not respect, the military gives the small but well organized group, which considers itself at war with the government and U.S. "imperialism."

Aside from its proven ability to kidnap foreign executives for million dollar ransoms and strike at military and police with light losses, little is known about ERP.

It's one of the best organized of the many underground groups involved in Argentina's current wave of kidnapings, which claimed 190 victims last year and a score so far in 1974.

The kidnapings have driven hundreds of American executives to hire bodyguards, move operations to neighboring countries, or return to the United States and leave the business in the hands of Argentines.

Esso Argentina Co. is currently negotiating with ERP on a $10 million ransom demand for the release of 36-year-old U.S. executive Victor E. Samuelson.

The little known publicly about ERP comes from police, military, leftist and diplomatic sources—as well as the clandestine news conferences of the guerilla group itself.

ERP appears to have 3,000 members across Argentina, bankrolled by kidnap ransoms ranging as high as $3.8 million paid for a Swiss executive.

It was organized four years ago as the armed branch of the Workers' Revolutionary Party, a Marxist group of middle class students. Leftist sources say ERP now has many blue collar recruits.

President Juan D. Peron championed guerrilla tactics during his 18-year exile, but has vowed to annihilate ERP's "criminal terrorism" since becoming president last year.

The split with Peron is severely testing ERP's support in working class areas, which are solidly behind the president. ERP is helped, however, by forcing firms to pay some ransoms in food to the poor. Not many residents of Argentina's "villas miserias" shanty towns have turned down the free food.

Federal pay outpacing industry, report says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A report complied by a private tax foundation indicates salaries of average federal employes are rising faster than private industry's and the cost of living.

Average earnings of federal employes increased 88 per cent from 1962 to 1972, compared with a 66 per cent average in private industry and a 38 per cent rise in the consumer price index, the report, prepared by the nonprofit Tax Foundation, Inc., said.

The 23-page report, entitled "Recent Federal Personnel Cost Trends," said civil servants have had two pay raises since 1972 and that the average federal salary has more than doubled in the last 11 years.

"Federal personnel costs, now running $64 billion a year, are estimated at nearly $70 billion in the administration's proposed budget for next year," the report said.

This would be an increase of $28 billion or 66 per cent since 1968, "despite drastic reductions in the number of military personnel and some reduction in civilian employment over the seven year period."

The foundation report blamed inflationary federal employment costs on the Salary Reform Act of 1962 passed when government pay scales were significantly below that of private industry, and "grade creep," under which tenured employes routinely receive raises as they climb the Civil Service ladder.

Figures published in the report showed jobs in the lowest five Civil Service grades declined by 82,000 from 1968 to 1973, while employment in the top five grades increased by 55,200, or 14 per cent.

"As recently as 1968, more than half of all General Schedule employes were paid annual salaries of less than $8,000 and fewer than 2 per cent got $20,000 or more," the report said. "By 1972, only 23 per cent were making less than $8,000 and nearly 12 per cent were making $20,000 or more."

The Tax Foundation recommended the government review federal guidelines for comparing salaries with private industry.

At Wit's End

The music goes round, round

By ERMA BOMBECK

A long time ago someone figured out that if cows gave more milk when music was piped into the barn, think what it could do for a group of girls at their IBM Selectric.

Today, I defy you to find a corner of this world void of music. The question is, does music indeed soothe the savage beast? Or does it drive a person to a corner wall into a fetal position with his hands over his ears rocking back and forth.

Some of my friends who work in offices tell me something happens to a person who listens to Lester Lanin for 8½ hours. It's nothing personal about Lester. it's just that when you keep pace with 8½ hours of "Ebb Tide" played in a military march tempo, you are exhausted before lunch.

I had one friend, Wanda, who was awakened every morning by her clock radio and a disk jockey whose theme was a bouncy, "Everything's Coming Up Roses." Her car pool had a radio nut who turned the volume up so loud he would sit through three lights before he realized his motor had died. At work she was ushered in by violins strumming, "Begin the Beguine." On her lunch hour she shopped in a funky place where the decibels were so loud she had to read the salesperson's lips. She couldn't seem to escape it. Her dentist hung over her mouth while his drill kept time to a bossa nova. She ate her dinner at her favorite restaurant all the while buttering her roll in time with a Viennese waltz.

Her entire life was dominated by music . . . at the pool, in elevators, in restrooms, in planes, theater lobbies, and in churches.

She came to my house one afternoon and knocked desperately on the door. She looked terrible and I summoned her in. She hesitated. "Do you have your radio on?"

"No," I said.

"Do you have stereo playing?"

"No," I repeated.

"Do you hum?" she asked, her eyes narrowing suspiciously.

I shook my head.

"Then, maybe, just for a minute."

"Wanda," I said, "you've got to get hold of yourself. Music is supposed to calm a person. Why they even play soft music to get plants to grow."

"Did you ever see a plant with ears, Dummy?" she asked. "Wait a minute! What's that?" she asked, her eyes shifting from one side to the other. "YOU DIDN'T TELL ME YOU HAD A BIRD!"

Poor Wanda. I didn't have the heart to tell her I didn't.

University Women give education funds

The Ontario-Upland Branch of the American Association of University Women is donating $1,000 to the AAUW educational foundation and fellowships program, according to Mrs. Marjorie Bundgard, chairman of the local fellowships committee.

Of the donated monies, a fellowship in the amount of $500 will be designated in honor of Mrs. J. D. McCleary of Upland, a long time member and officer of the branch.

The fellowship will be given to a woman chosen by the AAUW educational foundation to pursue study beyond the master's degree. The remainder of the money will go to the AAUW educational foundation for undesignated educational projects including the advancement of research in many fields.

Mrs. McCleary is being honored for her service as bulletin editor, assistant treasurer, section chairman and for her activity on committees since 1961. She has operated her own typing and mimeographing business in her home since 1959. She was formerly employed with McCann-Erickson Advertising Agency in New York.

Former recipients of named gift fellowship awards by the Ontario-Upland AAUW unit include Mmes. Ruth Milliken, Betty Wayne, Hope Asay, Beverly Barrett, Pearl Clark, Marjorie Bundgard and Esther Close.

Using knife or fork

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: Why are so many Americans reluctant to use a knife and fork as they should be used at meals? I refer to the habit of so many people trying to cut food with the edge of the fork while the knife is lying idle. I recently noticed a man struggling unsuccessfully to cut a slice of bacon with the fork and giving up in despair when he failed to do so.

"I once heard the story that, at the time when all cutlery was made in England, a shipment of forks was sent in one ship and the knives in another. Unfortunately, the ship with the knives floundered, so the American colonists had only the forks to use. Hence, it became custom. The story is no doubt untrue but logical. Some people will say, if you can cut it with the fork, dos so. What do you say?—R.D., Staten Island, N.Y.

I had not heard that story. It is probably apocryphal. Prior to Cardinal Richelieu's introduction of the fork, knives alone—with fingers—were used in the eating of food. The fork was an obvious refinement. Thereafter, to cut with knife and fork any food that could be cut with the fork alone was considered, I suppose, boorish. At any rate, the rule still exists—within reason.

You don't try to cut a piece of crisp bacon with a fork because it would fly in all directions. A piece of limp bacon would probably have to be cut with knife and fork.

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: Would you please comment on people who talk and talk while a bridge hand is being played? That is just when one needs to remember and to concentrate. It's fine to talk between hands, but bridge is a game of concentration. — L., Duluth, Ga."

You are right. When a bridge hand is being played, there should be no conversation. If the dummy circulates, there should be no kibitzing.

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: Sometime ago a reader wrote you about tatting. The reason no one is tatting any more is that a decent shuttle or the small balls of tatting thread cannot be found. I tatted for many years until my shuttle wore out. All I can find now is a metal shuttle which is impossible to tat with. It is soldered shut on both ends, and the ends need to be open in order to lengthen or shorten the thread while tatting. I would rather give up tatting than use it and be frustrated. I would appreciate knowing where I can buy a plain plastic shuttle and where I can get a good supply of thread.—Mrs. G.B., Pomona, Calif."

Can any of my other readers help? I have had an amazing amount of mail on ty is subject. Perhaps the tatters are using old shuttles or have adjusted to the metal ones.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Finding right slot

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm 28, a bachelor, and I've changed jobs three times in the past two years. I don't know if I'm just lazy, a perpetual work-hater or that I'm just always getting into the wrong slot. But anyway, I've done it again and I'm about to quit for a fourth time. This is driving my parents crazy and they keep reminding me that they spent a lot of money on my education and I don't seem to have profited from it. I got good grades in college and I'm not considered dumb.

The problem is that I don't care about the outcome of any of the work assignments I've ever had. I'm now in an ad agency getting a good salary and I'm bored to death. Nothing seems significant or relevant. I know it's time I began thinking about marriage and settling down, but until I find work that's more satisfying I don't see how I can possibly do that. — A. M.

Dear A. M.: The problem you face is becoming more and more common. A report on work in America compiled by a special government task force for Elliot Richardson, former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, revealed that a large number of Americans, both blue-and white-collar workers, found much of their work boring, monotonous and unsatisfying. This discontent seems to come from a feeling that the end result doesn't matter. As you say, it is not relevant, or at least it doesn't seem so to the workers. This, according to the report, affects every level of working society.

Since most people spend so much of their lives on the job, it's important that they get some sense of satisfaction and gratifcation from what they do. Sometimes it takes many changes to very different jobs before the person finds something he considers rewarding.

You may have to compromise on salary, but in the long run, it is better to make less money and to gain fulfillment from what you're doing.

Dissatisfaction is one of the major problems people face. The longer one delays action in switching from a job, the more tension is likely to build up from this sense of boredom and resentment.

No job is perfect, but if you find that every hour of every day, or even if the greater part of your time on the job, is making you angry or bored, then you should try another field. Some people who feel stuck in an office all day might be much happier driving a truck or working at a more physical job that would give them time outdoors. Parents may pressure against this change, especially if they feel they've made sacrifices to provide an education, but most parents will eventually realize that mental and physical health are more important than status in a job.

Most people need to feel what they produce on a job is of value. If work seems meaningless or absurd it affects the individual's self-image and self-respect. Since many Americans identify what they are with what they do, if their work has little or no meaning, they may also come to feel that they have no meaning or value either. The result may be alcoholism, sexual promiscuity, or an overall feeling of depression.

Some individuals, on the other hand, find work boring and unpleasant because they have never learned that all work requires postponing pleasure. Many feel they are put upon if they have to get up in the morning and report to any job. They would like to return to the wonderful state of infancy when they were cared for by others and when they had no responibility. Anyone who has not conquered his rebellion against the dictates of his family may find it difficult to take orders from someone in authority. He will never be abie to find work satisfaction until he has faced the meaningless rebellion that he is actually waging against his father or mother.

Whatever your work problems, analyze them now and try to solve them before too much more time passes.

LET'S ASK THE COOK
by Nan Wiley

DEAR NAN:

My mother and I are interested in finding a recipe for making crackers like saltines. We have looked in a lot of recipe for a baby's teething to find anything. Also, I had a recpe for a baby's teething crackers but I lost it. Mrs. Carol Corb. Brunswick, Maine.

When I originated this column almost 13 years ago the first request I got was for homemade soda crackers. I couldn't believe it. Even my grandma had bought hers by the box. Neither my editor nor I thought we had a prayer of locating that one, but I tossed it to the readers and kept my fingers crossed. To our amazement the mail poured in by the sackful. Readers hadn't actually made them, but they remembered eating them when they were kids, so they dug into old cookbooks, trunks, attics, family papers, wrote to distant relatives who might be of help, went to no end of trouble. Almost every recipe was identical.

With your hands, rub together 5 cups unsifted flour, ½ cup lard, ½ teaspoon soda and ½ teaspoon salt. (Today you can use a pastry blender.) Add enough water to make a stiff dough. Now—this seemed to be important—beat dough on the board with a rolling pin for 20 minutes. Whether that is necessary with today's flours I can't say. Roll thin, cut in squares or oblongs, prick plentifully with a fork. Bake in a 350 oven until faintly beige. Nothing was said about salting, but you can make salt stick into the crackers if you will brush the rolled out dough with an egg white beaten with about 2 teaspoons water until foamy.

Another version was more like butter crackers with 6 unbeaten eggs, 12 tablespoons milk, 6 tablespoons butter and ½ teaspoon soda mixed with that same "enough flour to make a stiff dough." Bake as above.

I am not familiar with the teething crackers and a fast check of a dozen likely books yields nothing. I recall that my mother used to buy arrowroot cookies when my sister was a baby, but so far I find no recipe for those either. I'll keep hunting.

Now there is just room enough for a quick tip on another use for foil.

Recently when I took a chocolate loaf cake to be auctioned for charity, I lined the pan with heavy duty aluminum foil with a couple of inches excess sticking up on the long sides of the pan. Grease as usual. When cake was done and cooled for a few minutes, it was easy to lift out without cracking. When well cooled I wrapped it completely with more foil and tied it with bright ribbons. That way it not only stays fresh but you don't need to worry about pan being returned.

UCLA to host Shakespeare company

LOS ANGELES — The Royal Shakespeare Company of London will present two entertainment pieces in UCLA's Royce Hall June 8-15.

The works, to be performed on alternate nights throughout the engagement, are "The Hollow Crown," an unusual exploration of England's royalty through history, using music, poetry, speeches, letters and other writings, and "Pleasure and Repentance," a light-hearted look at love, drawing from a variety of literary sources from Genesis to the Rolling Stones.

Sir Michael Redgrave will head the list of players, which includes Dame Peggy Ashcroft, Roy Dotrice, Paul Hardwich and lutenist-guitarist-singer Martin Best.

"The Hollow Crown" emerges as an anthology depicting the kings and queens of England as they were, with all their follies and foibles. The words are those of each period's historians, contemporary chroniclers, playwrights and the monarchs themselves.

Among its resources are 15-year-old Jane Austin's version of history illustrating her hatred of Elizabeth I, a love letter written by Edward III to the Countess of Salisbury, Henry VII's secret memorandum to his ambassador to examine the Queen of Naples and report back to him ("to mark whether there be any hair about her lips or not, etc."), and a strong diatribe of James I on tobacco.

"Pleasure and Repentance" opens with the question "What Is Love?" and attempts to respond through a series of extracts in English literature, much of it not familiar to most. Suitably, it begins and ends with Sir Walter Raleigh offering "A Description of Love": "that fountain and well where pleasure and repentance dwell," hence the show's title.

Other gems in this entertainment include D. H. Lawrence's sour observations about "The Mess of Love," John Donne's "To His Mistress Going to Bed."

International dance fete scheduled in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES — The 27th annual International Folk Dance Festival will be presented in the Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center at 8 p.m. March 23.

The program will include Ghawazee belly dances from Egypt performed by Aisha Ali and her company; a prayer ritual from Yeman danced, sung and drummed by Israelis Avremi Manzur and Rehavia Yakovee; Bhaskar of India, whom many critics consider the foremost Kathakali artist of this generation; tango and gaucho dances from Argentina by Carlos Avilas and company; and gypsy flamenco by Juan Talavera, Chinin de Triana and ompany.

Actor Telly Salalas, currently starring in the Kojak television series, will narrate the event, produced and directed by Irwin Parnes.

An Americana folk cycle featuring four groups will be the closing highlight of the three-hour festival: the American Indian Inter-Tribal Dancers, Chanters and Drummers in eagle and snake dances of the Great Plains; Dr. Tillman Hall's Lariats in a frontier days' "Hoedown"; the Liberty Assembly's kinetic American fad dances; and the William Coser Dances with their hot jazz combo.

A first for the festival will be high leaping Alexandru and Mihai David, formerly of the Roumanian National Folk Ballet, guest starring with the Gandy Dancers.

Also performing will be Scot James Lomath with his company in Hornpipe; the Makarian Armenian Dancers, Singers and Musicians; the Karpatok Hungarian Dancers, Athan Karras' Greek Intersection Dancers and Bazouki Players, Hanayagi Japanese Kabuki Dancers, Prokopiy Ukranian Spirit Dancers and String Orchestra, Aguilar Ballet Folklorico of Mexico with Jorocho Band, and the Mapu Polynisian Dancers, Singers, Drummers and Fire Juggiers. Folk songs from around the world will be sung by the Pasadena City College Chamber Singers under the direction of William Hatcher.

The Crystal Glass Convention, a rock group from Ontario, will appear at 7 p.m. the same day.

SINGING FAMILY — The DeFranco Family, two sisters and three brothers, will perform in the John Wayne Theater of Knott's Berry Farm, Buena Park, at 5, 7 and 9 p.m. March 9 and at 2, 4 and 6 p.m. the following day. The Canadian-born group's record, "Heartbeat, It's a Lovebeat," has sold more than two million copies. The DeFrancos appeared recently on the Sonny and Cher television show.

Four Colleges Players to offer musical show by Pitzer student

CLAREMONT The Four Colleges Players of Claremont will present an original play by Pitzer College student Glenda Raikes in the Strut and Fret Theater, Scripps College, at 8 p.m. March 8, 9 and 10.

Tickets are $1 general, 50 cents for students.

Miss Raikes, who began writing plays when she was 12, describes "Nobody's Birthday" as a " 'musical comedy' about death and impotence."

"Basically this is a surrealistic play concerning a man torn between his fear of life and his fear of death," she said. "It's my concept of a deteriorating man in a deteriorating country surrounded by halucinations, the death symbols of that deterioration."

John Harnegal portrays Jim, the main character, and Besty Young plays Wanda I, his wife. Burt, the angel of hope and hopelessness, is portrayed by David Strickland. Ms. Tyrannee, another key role, is played by Ron Hostetler. Others in the cast include Steve Cotten, Ken Sturm, Richard Hiller, Sarah Spurr, Jim Yarmo, Al Barbieri, Maggie Brown, Hester Laddey and Cydney Bernard.

All cast members except Jim and Wanda I will wear masks throughout the play. The masks are being designed by perry Jamieson.

Taped music ranging from electronic compositions to Greek choruses to an original satire of Lawrence Welk with the music of gongs and jet planes interspersed, will come from space or from a toy piano played by a masked character. Sound effects will be arranged by Barbieri and Jim Klessig. Experimental special effects and concepts in ethereal lighting are being arranged by Barbieri and Bruce Bidlack.

Miss Raikes is directing her play under the general supervision of Jesse Swan, professor of drama.

Mickey Mouse fools tellers

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Embarrassed officials are wondering how a check signed by Mickey Mouse cleared their bank.

Michael MacLean, 23, Reno, said he signed the name of the famous rodent on a whim, just to see if anyone would catch it. No one did.

He said he won't challenge the payment of $9.64 to a department store because he owed it anyway. But he said he wonders what might happen if Mickey Mouse were a real, live check forger.

Asked how a check signed by Mickey Mouse could ever be approved for payment, a First National Bank official said, "I wish to heck I knew."

Not opposed to cutting red tape as long as its done lengthwise

By PATRICK J.KILLEN

CHICAGO (UPI) — The International Association of Professional Bureaucrats (IAPB) probably will make its first joint award this year to the Farm Home Administration and the Department Housing and of Urban Development (HUD), IAPB President James H. Boren said today.

The Washington - based bureaucrat said the two departments' treatment of an unidentified Texas town had made them frontrunners for the annual awards. Top accolade is the Order of the Bird, given to "those individuals who apply the principles of dynamic inaction and, by keeping things from happening, prevent mistakes from being made," Boren said.

Boren said the Texas community applied to the Farm Home Administration for help in a waste and sewage project but officials were told the community was too big and were directed to HUD.

He said HUD, after giving out guidelines and forms, "ultimately said they (the community) were too small" and sent them back to the Farm Administration. Because of growth during the period of inquiry, the Farm Administration sent them back to HUD "and that's where the matter sits," Boren said.

Boren said his efforts at needling bureaucracy, government and industrial, have had some success.

"We had some forms done away with and there has been some effect on corporations," he told the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education (AACTE) Thursday night.

"We, the professional bureaucrats of the world, believe progress is our greatest mistake. Nothing should be done for the first time.

"I must say very candidly I am shocked and amazed by the proceedings of the AACTE annual meeting. The sessions have tended to deal with substantitive issues and there has been a disturbing insistence on asking probing questions and seeking unequivocal answers.

"This is a frightening experience for a professional bureaucrat. Questions are to be posed, never answered. But if a question must be asked, the question should be a safe question, those questions that will not cause a ripple that may disturb the tranquility of the educational ship of state.

"I urge that teachers of teachers teach future teachers how to use the techniques of orbital dialoguing and fail-safe teaching.

"By fail-safe teaching I refer to multigenerational transmission of filtered knowledge from notebook to notebook. Thus future teachers will teach their students that which they have learned from their teachers and the material will have withstood the test of ages."

Last year, Boren challenged the Postal Service to a race and managed to ride horses, Pony Express style, from Philadelphia to Washington faster than a letter covering the same distance.

"I'm not opposed to cutting red tape," Boren said, "As long as it is cut lengthwise."

Police commissioner opens drive to outlaw handguns

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — The police commissioner of the "murder capital" of the United States Monday launched a campaign drive to outlaw handguns in Michigan.

Detroit Police Commissioner Philip A. Tannian announced he wants a referendum on outlawing handguns on the November ballot.

"The time has come to put the pistols away," said Tannian. "If we don't put the pistols away, this year of 1974 will be worse than 1973 in homicides by gun."

He said the number of unjustifiable homicides in Michigan last year was 1,101, with 53 per cent of them caused by handguns.

Under his proposal, the state would buy up all pistols currently under private ownership—a number Tannian said was between 1.3 and 1.5 million and worth perhaps $50 million. The proposed measure, if approved by voters, would not affect rifles or shotguns, nor would it cover handguns owned by the military, antique collectors or licensed clubs with storage facilities.

"We're talking about pistol control, not gun control," the head of Detroit's police force said. "Pistols are readily available and throughout the state and are easily concealed."

Tannian emphasized his role in the petition drive is not official, but still drew a stern warning from Detroit Mayor Coleman Young. According to a Young aide, Tannian was ordered to "keep his involvement as police commissioner to absolute zero."

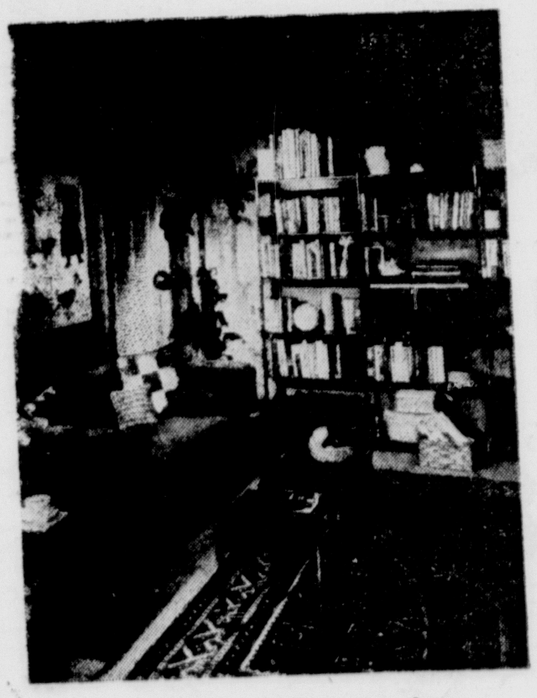

"He was cautioned that he should make it clear that his position is not the position of Mayor Young," said Robert Popa, Young's press secretary.

Tannian said he must have 265,000 signatures before July 8 to get the proposal on the November general election ballot.

How coffee break started

The Boston Tea Party of Dec. 16, 1773 is probably responsible for today's coffee break. Tea drinking was an almost insatiable habit with colonial Americas; they drank it practically around the clock. But after the famed Tea Party, tea drinking was frowned upon as unpatriotic and colonists turned to an import from the West Indies coffee.

U.S. naval team helping Suez Canal mine-clearing

DAMASCUS (UPI) — At the request of Egypt, an American naval team is surveying the removal of mines at the southern end of the Suez Canal.

A high American official who reported the presence of the team recently said the United States is willing to help clear the 101-mile waterway, blocked since the 1967 Middle East War.

The official said the team was requested by Egypt following Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's last trip to the area in January, when he arranged the Israeli-Egyptian troop disengagement agreement. The team of five or six men has been at the canal for about a week, the official said.

The canal, between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, is one of the most important commercial links in the world.

Clearing the canal of mines, wrecks and silt will have some strategic advantages for Russia and may allow its Black Sea fleet to reach the Indian Ocean quicker.

(Informed Israeli sources have said previously that Israeli cargos—but not Israeli ships — would be allowed through the canal under the January disengagement agreement although the principle of free navigation is admitted.

(Once there is a final peace agreement between the Israelis and Arabs, Israeli ships also may use the waterway, sources said).

Blackout staged to prevent any electrocution

STOCKTON, Calif. (UPI) — In an attempt to prevent the electrocution of a suspected alien, a 30-minute downtown blackout was created here Tuesday.

Border patrol agent Jim Kerr said Hipolito Lobato-Mandoza, 20, climbed a superstructure at a Pacific Gas and Electric Co. substation while being chased by officers.

PG&E disrupted power so the suspect would not be electrocuted. Officers then captured Lobato-Mendoza, who was held pending charges of illegal entry.

The downtown area of the city was blacked out during the power cessation, a period of about 30 minutes.

TROUBLED OVER HIGH INTEREST RATES

It is true interest rates have risen, but they do seem to have stabilized in the past several months. And while the rates may seem high, they are not climbing as rapidly as are labor and material costs. An increase or a decrease of ½ percent in interest rates only amounts to 30c per month per $1000 on a 25 year loan. Is it really wise to deny yourself the security, pleasure and pride of home ownership on the vague hope of interest rates going down, thus saving you only $3 or $4 a month? The value of your home will increase at a much faster rate than can be gained by any lowering of interest rates. NOW is a good time to buy!

WONDER WHERE TO BEGIN LOOKING?

Worry no more . . . most folks have found that the best place to shop for that new or lived-in home is in the Classified Real Estate columns of the Progress-Bulletin. It's here (and only here) that each day you'll find the very latest offerings of homes 'for sale' . . . advertised by the area's leading real estate firms and builders. Check the want ads today—and every day—to find the home that satisfies all your needs.
